Voters find candidates fuzzy, poll says

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan has made a strong impression during this campaign year with his advocacy of higher military spending and a overhaul of the welfare system, an Associated Press poll shows.

Reagan's stands provide the two clearest links between a candidate and an issue in the otherwise blurred picture of presidential contenders and positions that Americans now see after four months of intensive primary campaigning.

In the poll designed to probe Americans' views on the issues, the only other clear link of a candidate and an issues comes from supporters of Rep. Morris Udall with their accurate perception of his views and their concern about pollution, civil rights and solving energy problems.

The survey, conducted for The AP by the Roper Organization of New York between May 8 and May 15, found that an average of more than half of the potential voters didn't know where their favorite candidate stands on five major issues.

The other major findings of the poll were:

—Economic issues head the list of Americans' concerns during this election year, with 59 per cent of those questioned naming inflation, unemployment or holding down government spending as their main worry.

—Crime was the second biggest concern for Americans. Lawlessness in general, drug abuse and criminal acts by public officials were all in the top five issues.

—About 57 per cent of all Americans are choosing a candidate to support for his personal qualities, not for his stands on the issues. More than 58 per cent of Jimmy Carter's supporters, for example, said personal factors were the basis for their decision, compared to only 20 per cent who cited issues.

—In addition to more than half of the people not knowing where the candidates stand, many supporters were wrong in naming where their favorite candidate stood on five major issues. Carters' backers were the most likely to name the wrong stand for their contender, missing four out of five issues picked to differentiate among the candidates.

During the second week in May when the poll was conducted, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Sen. Frank Church scored their initial primary victories. Because the national perceptions of Brown and Church had not then taken shape, the poll did not test their supporters' perceptions.

By the date of the interviewing, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace had stopped campaigning and was running fourth in delegates. Thus, his supporters' perceptions were also not tested.

Reagan's supporters stand out in the poll above those of other candidates for their precision in pegging his stands on military spending and welfare.

By a 65-9 margin, his backers correctly linked him with pushing for more money for national defense. But even then 26 per cent of his supporters could not say where he stood.

Reagan's supporters are the main reservoir of concern about U.S.-U.S.S.R relations and military spending found by the poll. About 22 per cent of his backers named these two issues as the most important ones, close to double the figure for any other candidate.

Looking at the poll another way, concern over detente is centered with self-identified conservatives. About 14 per cent of the conservatives named it the major issue, compared with only 9 per cent of moderates and 10 per cent of liberals.

The former California governor's supporters also correctly linked him by a 51-8 edge with proposals to turn the welfare system back to state control.

Even for Reagan, however, his supporters' view of his stand on issues blurs when they move away from the two top positions.

They incorrectly said by a 25-16 margin that he supports dismantling the oil companies. But 59 per cent of his backers didn't know where he stood on this issue.

By narrow margins, they correctly said he favors a constitutional amendment to end abortions and opposes the goverment guarantee of a job to everyone. But the percentages of those who didn't know his stand on the issues was far higher than on the military and welfare questions.

Reflecting this precision in their views, Reagan's supporters were the lowest of any candidates' in saying personal factors were the basis for their decision. But 48 per cent of his backers still cited personality over issues.

About 29 per cent of those who said Reagan is their favorite candidate cited issues as the reason for their decision, the same percentage of Udall's backers who cited issues as their reason. About 57 per cent of his supporters say personal factors were the basis for their decision.

Udall's supporters correctly gauged his stand on all five issues examined in the poll, the best showing of any candidate. Here are the issues and the margins by which his supporters named his stand correctly:

—For government guaranteed jobs, 47-19;

—For breaking up major oil companies, 46-10;

—Against anti-abortion amendment, 41-9;

—Against spending more on military, 53-20;

—Against turning welfare back to state, 25-20.

It is no surprise that Udall has the greatest percentage of supporters who identify themselves as liberals, since he has said he is the liberals' candidate. The poll found 61 per cent of his support came from people who identify themselves as liberals.

Udall's supporters also named issues long identified as liberal as their main concerns far more than any other candiddates'.

For example, solving energy problems and insuring equal rights for Americans of all races were each major issues for 23 per cent of Udall's supporters, ranking right behind inflation and unemployment. Next was air and water pollution with 20 per cent.

No other candidate's supporters cited those issues with nearly that frequency.

6 radios taken in Charleston

CHARLESTON — A break-in and the theft of five citizens band radios and a two-way radio are under investigation by police.

Morris Machine Shop, South Ninth Street, was broken into sometime between 5 p.m. Wednesday and 7:30 a.m. today, when the break-in was discovered.

A window on the south side was broken to enter the building. However, nothing was reported taken.

David Williams, 6 Willow Drive, reported to police Wednesday the theft of a citizens band radio and a calculator valued together at $209.95 were stolen from his truck sometime between 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and 7 a.m. Wednesday.

A citizens band radio valued at $179.95 was reported stolen from a car owned by William Glass, 510 E. Cypress St. The theft occurred sometime between 6 p.m. Tuesday and 11:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Two CBs valued at $329.90 were taken from separate vehicles owned by Jackie and Madeline Marshall, 308 E. Commercial St., sometime between midnight Tuesday and noon Wednesday. The theft was reported at 1:40 p.m. Wednesday.

The theft of a 25-channel CB and an extension amplifier was reported by Robert Hearnes, who said the items were taken from his car while it was parked in front of First Security State Bank on Main Street. The theft occurred sometime between noon and 9 p.m. Wednesday.

A two-way radio and a small fire extinguisher were taken from a truck owned by Charleston Farm Store on East Marshall Street sometime between 5 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. today when it was reported to police.

Fire guts trailer

Damaged belongings lay scattered on the ground this morning outside the Bob Taylor home, 232 Harry St. The trailer caught fire Wednesday night and was gutted before firemen could extinguish the blaze. Taylor was not at home at the time of the fire.

Hays gives up committee post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Wayne Hays stepped down today as chairman of the House Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee until the investigation of his role in a payroll-sex scandal is completed.

Hays said he was relinquishing control of the committee to avoid putting "an unnecessary and unwarranted burden on my fellow Democratic candidates."

The congressman said he is confident he will be vindicated.

But the Ohio Democrat said he did not want "to have my name on a check which might be used as a campaign issue against any Democratic candidate." The committee distributes campaign funds to Democratic congressional candidates around the country.

Stepping down marks the first serious blow to Hays' leadership position since a woman charged that he put her on his House Administration Committee payroll to be his mistress.

In making his announcement, Hays did not say what he will do in response to demands that he step down as chairman of the Administration Committee as well. He did not mention his position on that panel.

He said he will call a meeting of the campaign committee next Wednesday for the election of a temporary chairman to replace him.

"Although the charge against me has yet to be substantiated by credible evidence, I am confident that when all the facts are presented at the proper time and in the proper forum, it will be obvious that the charge against me will be shown to be false," Hays said.

He accepted no questions from reporters.

In making his announcement, Hays also said, "I have also decided to call a meeting of the Committee on House Administration to discuss with them any questions concerning my role as chairman of the House Administration Committee."

As Hays prepared his statement, the House ethics committee went into closed session to decide how to proceed with its investigtion of the charge.

Chairman John J. Flynt, D-Ga., said it was necessary to close the proceedings because names in addition to those of Hays and Elizabeth Ray would be used and disclosing them could be damaging.

Flynt added: "There are some things and some words I don't want to use publicly."

But Rep. Charles F. Bennett, D-Fla., a member of the committee, said: "We're not really confronted with filthy, dirty, four-letter words. We're confronted with acts that can be described delicately."

Economic talks set this month

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford announced today that six major industrialized nations will join the United States in an economic summit conference June 27-28 in Puerto Rico "to chart a course to keep the recovery moving forward."

Ford said that Canada, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan and the United Kingdom will participate in the session, which is a followup to a conference last November in Rambouillet, France.

He said it is necessary to meet again to chart a course that will keep the economic recovery moving forward at a healthy and sustained rate.

"The issue at the heart of the discussions is to determine what our nations can do, working together, to create a more prosperous and secure future for all our citizens," the President said.

Ford said it is vital to continue the process of "close consultation and cooperation" in all fields of common interest.

"In the past," he said, "world leaders have met to deal with crisis. But today's complex problems require that leaders meet to avoid them."

Ford's official announcement of the upcoming conference comes two days after White House officials said that "discussions are well along" for an economic summit.

Some critics have questioned Ford's scheduling of a summit meeting less than two months before the Republican presidential convention and while he is in a close contest with Ronald Reagan.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Tuesday that Ford is determined to pursue foreign and economic policies without regard to domestic politics. "The President feels that this is the appropriate time to have a follow-up economic meeting," Nessen said.

Mobile home gutted by fire in Sikeston

Fire gutted a mobile home Wednesday in Sikeston and a smoking telephone directory sent firemen hurrying to a rural home.

A mobile home occupied by Bob Taylor, 232 Harry St., was gutted at 8:50 p.m., according to firemen. The fire was apparently caused by an electrical short circuit behind a sofa.

Taylor was not at home when the fire broke out, firemen said.

At 10:44 p.m., firemen were called to the Carl Merideth home on Route Three after Merideth smelled what he thought was smoke from an electrical short.

Sikeston plans 21 day Honor America Salute

A 21-day Honor America Salute is being planned — beginning June 14 and continuing through July 4 — by the Sikeston Bicentennial Commission.

Beginning June 14, all merchants and home owners will be asked to fly the American flag, and churches will be asked to ring church bells or chimes at noon.

On July 1 and 2, the downtown merchants will hold a barbecue in Legion Park, featuring square dancing, arts and crafts shows and various contests.

On July 3, there will be an "Old - Fashioned Birthday in the Park" at Malone Park, with a talent show, Miss Firecracker beauty contest and a variety of contests for children.

On July 4, the Ministerial Alliance will sponsor a God Bless America Rally at the Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo Grounds, featuring a large youth choir made up of the combined choirs of local churches, a sermon by the Rev. William B. Hobson and a fireworks display.

Magna Carta going on display

WASHINGTON (AP) — An original copy of the Magna Carta, the 761-year-old document that marked an early triumph for individual liberty over big government, is going on display in the U.S. Capitol.

A delegation from the British Parliament planned to deliver the document to Congress today as a loan in honor of the Bicentennial.

The British delegation includes Lord Chanellor Elwyn-Jones, speaker of the House of Lords, and George Thomas, Speaker of the House of Commons.

They will hand ove the Latin-inscribed scroll amid full panoply to their American counterparts, including House Speaker Carl Albert and Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield.

Gasoline taken in burglary

KEWANEE — Vickers Service Station, located east of the Interstate 55 interchange with Routes W and P east of town, was burglarized sometime between 11 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. today.

The building appeared to have been entered after a vehicle had been driven against a door to knock out a glass, according to New Madrid County Deputy Sheriff Willis "Bo" Wingo.

A preliminary investigation disclosed that about $2 worth of gas was stolen, apparently after the burglars had turned on the switch to a gas pump.

Nothing seemed to be missing inside the station. However, an inventory has not been completed.

New Madrid adds donkey ballgame to 4th celebration

NEW MADRID — A donkey baseball game featuring three men's teams and one women's team has been announced as an added attraction to the city's Bicentennial Fourth of July celebration.

Sponsored by the Community Betterment Committee, the game will begin at 7 p.m. at the Little League Ball Park. Proceeds are earmarked for the committee's park pavilion fund.

Chairman Beth Henry said advance tickets are now available at a reduced price over the gate admission, and may be obtained from Mrs. Dot Halstead at the city museum, at the Bank of New Madrid or from team members and staff members.

Team rosters are composed of players from New Madrid, Lilbourn, East Prairie, Marston, LaForge and Kewanee.

Mrs. Henry said enthusiasm has been high among everyone involved in planning and staging the game, and that the event promises to provide a lot of laughs between the donkeys and the players.

The first three innings will feature the Colt 45's against the Bronco Busters and the next three innings will match the Leaping Lizards against the women's team, the Frantic Fillies.

Teams, sponsors and players are:

Colt .45's, sponsored by the Sport Shop; manager, Bobby Hedgepeth; and Bud Henry, Louis Jones, Hershel Lott, George Broughton, Bill Boyd, Howard "Mose" Phillips, Chuck Palmer, Gene Copeland, Furgie Hunter, Goob Martin and Francis Baird.

River pollution giving swimmers trouble

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — The author of a book called "Quit is a Four-Letter Word" received a stiff challenge from river pollution as he and a companion attempt to swim a 700-mile stretch of the Mississippi River.

Marine Capt. Alan Jones, 29, has broken out "with a severe skin disorder," his sister, Jill Jones, said here Wednesday.

"I think the swelling is slowing him up a little, but Alan won't quit," said Miss Jones, 18, of her brother's determined effort to swim from Minneapolis to St. Louis.

Jones developed the infection and swelling on Wednesday. It mostly afflicted "his lower body, primarily his right leg," said Miss Jones.

"The infection is affecting his kicking strokes," she said, noting that river pollution was suspected as the cause.

However, she added: "We're not sure what's causing it. He hasn't been to a doctor yet."

Jones, a native of LeMars, Iowa, and another physical fitness enthusiast, Wayne Thompson, 33, an insurance agent from Portland, Ore., started their adventure May 24. It is scheduled to end June 14 at the Golden Arch in St. Louis.

Jones, 5-foot-9 and 145 pounds, said the two men had been warned of river pollution at the start of their journey.

"We've received a few minor sores from the river, but otherwise no big effects from the pollution," Jones had said Tuesday — the day before his infection, including open sores, broke out.

Jones has written a recently-published book, "Quit is a Four-Letter Word."

"It's been selling good," Miss Jones said after the swimmers stopped for a reception here.

After being greeted by city and YMCA officials, the Marine Corps and a bicentennial committee, the men were to swim another 10 miles before stopping for the night.

They started the day below Cassville, Wis., and by noon had covered about 270 miles of their journey. They intended to swim as far as Bellevue, Iowa, on Thursday.

Accompaying the swimmers are Miss Jones, a 1976 graduate of Laurens, Iowa, High School, and Linda Jones, 28, wife of Capt. Jones.

"Alan circles check points on real good charts. We go to those check points, give the a little honey or fruit juice, make calls for them, find them at night and bring them back to a motel.

"Then we get up early each morning and take them back to the spot in the river where they left off."

In addition to river pollution, Jones said he and Thompson "had a couple of close calls from the barge traffic and had to scramble to get out of the way."

Voters find candidates fuzzy, poll says

NEW YORK (AP) — Ronald Reagan has made a strong impression during this campaign year with his advocacy of higher military spending and a overhaul of the welfare system, an Associated Press poll shows.

Reagan's stands provide the two clearest links between a candidate and an issue in the otherwise blurred picture of presidential contenders and positions that Americans now see after four months of intensive primary campaigning.

In the poll designed to probe Americans' views on the issues, the only other clear link of a candidate and an issues comes from supporters of Rep. Morris Udall with their accurate perception of his views and their concern about pollution, civil rights and solving energy problems.

The survey, conducted for The AP by the Roper Organization of New York between May 8 and May 15, found that an average of more than half of the potential voters didn't know where their favorite candidate stands on five major issues.

The other major findings of the poll were:

—Economic issues head the list of Americans' concerns during this election year, with 59 per cent of those questioned naming inflation, unemployment or holding down government spending as their main worry.

—Crime was the second biggest concern for Americans. Lawlessness in general, drug abuse and criminal acts by public officials were all in the top five issues.

—About 57 per cent of all Americans are choosing a candidate to support for his personal qualities, not for his stands on the issues. More than 58 per cent of Jimmy Carter's supporters, for example, said personal factors were the basis for their decision, compared to only 20 per cent who cited issues.

—In addition to more than half of the people not knowing where the candidates stand, many supporters were wrong in naming where their favorite candidate stood on five major issues. Carters' backers were the most likely to name the wrong stand for their contender, missing four out of five issues picked to differentiate among the candidates.

During the second week in May when the poll was conducted, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Sen. Frank Church scored their initial primary victories. Because the national perceptions of Brown and Church had not then taken shape, the poll did not test their supporters' perceptions.

By the date of the interviewing, Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace had stopped campaigning and was running fourth in delegates. Thus, his supporters' perceptions were also not tested.

Reagan's supporters stand out in the poll above those of other candidates for their precision in pegging his stands on military spending and welfare.

By a 65-9 margin, his backers correctly linked him with pushing for more money for national defense. But even then 26 per cent of his supporters could not say where he stood.

Reagan's supporters are the main reservoir of concern about U.S.-U.S.S.R relations and military spending found by the poll. About 22 per cent of his backers named these two issues as the most important ones, close to double the figure for any other candidate.

Looking at the poll another way, concern over detente is centered with self-identified conservatives. About 14 per cent of the conservatives named it the major issue, compared with only 9 per cent of moderates and 10 per cent of liberals.

The former California governor's supporters also correctly linked him by a 51-8 edge with proposals to turn the welfare system back to state control.

They incorrectly said by a 25-16 margin that he supports dismantling the oil companies. But 59 per cent of his backers didn't know where he stood on this issue.

By narrow margins, they correctly said he favors a constitutional amendment to end abortions and opposes the goverment guarantee of a job to everyone. But the percentages of those who didn't know his stand on the issues was far higher than on the military and welfare questions.

Reflecting this precision in their views, Reagan's supporters were the lowest of any candidates' in saying personal factors were the basis for their decision. But 48 per cent of his backers still cited personality over issues.

About 29 per cent of those who said Reagan is their favorite candidate cited issues as the reason for their decision, the same percentage of Udall's backers who cited issues as their reason. About 57 per cent of his supporters say personal factors were the basis for their decision.

Udall's supporters correctly gauged his stand on all five issues examined in the poll, the best showing of any candidate. Here are the issues and the margins by which his supporters named his stand correctly:

—For government guaranteed jobs, 47-19;

—For breaking up major oil companies, 46-10;

—Against anti-abortion amendment, 41-9;

—Against spending more on military, 53-20;

—Against turning welfare back to state, 25-20.

It is no surprise that Udall has the greatest percentage of supporters who identify themselves as liberals, since he has said he is the liberals' candidate. The poll found 61 per cent of his support came from people who identify themselves as liberals.

Udall's supporters also named issues long identified as liberal as their main concerns far more than any other candiddates'.

For example, solving energy problems and insuring equal rights for Americans of all races were each major issues for 23 per cent of Udall's supporters, ranking right behind inflation and unemployment. Next was air and water pollution with 20 per cent.

No other candidate's supporters cited those issues with nearly that frequency.

Hays gives up committee post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Wayne Hays stepped down today as chairman of the House Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee until the investigation of his role in a payroll-sex scandal is completed.

Hays said he was relinquishing control of the committee to avoid putting "an unnecessary and unwarranted burden on my fellow Democratic candidates."

The congressman said he is confident he will be vindicated.

But the Ohio Democrat said he did not want "to have my name on a check which might be used as a campaign issue against any Democratic candidate." The committee distributes campaign funds to Democratic congressional candidates around the country.

Stepping down marks the first serious blow to Hays' leadership position since a woman charged that he put her on his House Administration Committee payroll to be his mistress.

In making his announcement, Hays did not say what he will do in response to demands that he step down as chairman of the Administration Committee as well. He did not mention his position on that panel.

He said he will call a meeting of the campaign committee next Wednesday for the election of a temporary chairman to replace him.

"Although the charge against me has yet to be substantiated by credible evidence, I am confident that when all the facts are presented at the proper time and in the proper forum, it will be obvious that the charge against me will be shown to be false," Hays said.

He accepted no questions from reporters.

In making his announcement, Hays also said, "I have also decided to call a meeting of the Committee on House Administration to discuss with them any questions concerning my role as chairman of the House Administration Committee."

As Hays prepared his statement, the House ethics committee went into closed session to decide how to proceed with its investigtion of the charge.

Chairman John J. Flynt, D-Ga., said it was necessary to close the proceedings because names in addition to those of Hays and Elizabeth Ray would be used and disclosing them could be damaging.

Flynt added: "There are some things and some words I don't want to use publicly."

But Rep. Charles F. Bennett, D-Fla., a member of the committee, said: "We're not really confronted with filthy, dirty, four-letter words. We're confronted with acts that can be described delicately."

Economic talks set this month

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford announced today that six major industrialized nations will join the United States in an economic summit conference June 27-28 in Puerto Rico "to chart a course to keep the recovery moving forward."

Ford said that Canada, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan and the United Kingdom will participate in the session, which is a followup to a conference last November in Rambouillet, France.

He said it is necessary to meet again to chart a course that will keep the economic recovery moving forward at a healthy and sustained rate.

"The issue at the heart of the discussions is to determine what our nations can do, working together, to create a more prosperous and secure future for all our citizens," the President said.

Ford said it is vital to continue the process of "close consultation and cooperation" in all fields of common interest.

"In the past," he said, "world leaders have met to deal with crisis. But today's complex problems require that leaders meet to avoid them."

Ford's official announcement of the upcoming conference comes two days after White House officials said that "discussions are well along" for an economic summit.

Some critics have questioned Ford's scheduling of a summit meeting less than two months before the Republican presidential convention and while he is in a close contest with Ronald Reagan.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Tuesday that Ford is determined to pursue foreign and economic policies without regard to domestic politics. "The President feels that this is the appropriate time to have a follow-up economic meeting," Nessen said.

Mobile home gutted by fire in Sikeston

Fire gutted a mobile home Wednesday in Sikeston and a smoking telephone directory sent firemen hurrying to a rural home.

A mobile home occupied by Bob Taylor, 232 Harry St., was gutted at 8:50 p.m., according to firemen. The fire was apparently caused by an electrical short circuit behind a sofa.

Taylor was not at home when the fire broke out, firemen said.

At 10:44 p.m., firemen were called to the Carl Merideth home on Route Three after Merideth smelled what he thought was smoke from an electrical short.

Sikeston plans 21 day Honor America Salute

A 21-day Honor America Salute is being planned — beginning June 14 and continuing through July 4 — by the Sikeston Bicentennial Commission.

Beginning June 14, all merchants and home owners will be asked to fly the American flag, and churches will be asked to ring church bells or chimes at noon.

On July 1 and 2, the downtown merchants will hold a barbecue in Legion Park, featuring square dancing, arts and crafts shows and various contests.

On July 3, there will be an "Old - Fashioned Birthday in the Park" at Malone Park, with a talent show, Miss Firecracker beauty contest and a variety of contests for children.

On July 4, the Ministerial Alliance will sponsor a God Bless America Rally at the Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo Grounds, featuring a large youth choir made up of the combined choirs of local churches, a sermon by the Rev. William B. Hobson and a fireworks display.

Magna Carta going on display

WASHINGTON (AP) — An original copy of the Magna Carta, the 761-year-old document that marked an early triumph for individual liberty over big government, is going on display in the U.S. Capitol.

A delegation from the British Parliament planned to deliver the document to Congress today as a loan in honor of the Bicentennial.

The British delegation includes Lord Chanellor Elwyn-Jones, speaker of the House of Lords, and George Thomas, Speaker of the House of Commons.

They will hand ove the Latin-inscribed scroll amid full panoply to their American counterparts, including House Speaker Carl Albert and Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield.

Gasoline taken in burglary

KEWANEE — Vickers Service Station, located east of the Interstate 55 interchange with Routes W and P east of town, was burglarized sometime between 11 p.m. Wednesday and 7 a.m. today.

The building appeared to have been entered after a vehicle had been driven against a door to knock out a glass, according to New Madrid County Deputy Sheriff Willis "Bo" Wingo.

A preliminary investigation disclosed that about $2 worth of gas was stolen, apparently after the burglars had turned on the switch to a gas pump.

Nothing seemed to be missing inside the station. However, an inventory has not been completed.

New Madrid adds donkey ballgame to 4th celebration

NEW MADRID — A donkey baseball game featuring three men's teams and one women's team has been announced as an added attraction to the city's Bicentennial Fourth of July celebration.

Sponsored by the Community Betterment Committee, the game will begin at 7 p.m. at the Little League Ball Park. Proceeds are earmarked for the committee's park pavilion fund.

Chairman Beth Henry said advance tickets are now available at a reduced price over the gate admission, and may be obtained from Mrs. Dot Halstead at the city museum, at the Bank of New Madrid or from team members and staff members.

Team rosters are composed of players from New Madrid, Lilbourn, East Prairie, Marston, LaForge and Kewanee.

Mrs. Henry said enthusiasm has been high among everyone involved in planning and staging the game, and that the event promises to provide a lot of laughs between the donkeys and the players.

The first three innings will feature the Colt 45's against the Bronco Busters and the next three innings will match the Leaping Lizards against the women's team, the Frantic Fillies.

Teams, sponsors and players are:

Colt .45's, sponsored by the Sport Shop; manager, Bobby Hedgepeth; and Bud Henry, Louis Jones, Hershel Lott, George Broughton, Bill Boyd, Howard "Mose" Phillips, Chuck Palmer, Gene Copeland, Furgie Hunter, Goob Martin and Francis Baird.

River pollution giving swimmers trouble

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — The author of a book called "Quit is a Four-Letter Word" received a stiff challenge from river pollution as he and a companion attempt to swim a 700-mile stretch of the Mississippi River.

Marine Capt. Alan Jones, 29, has broken out "with a severe skin disorder," his sister, Jill Jones, said here Wednesday.

"I think the swelling is slowing him up a little, but Alan won't quit," said Miss Jones, 18, of her brother's determined effort to swim from Minneapolis to St. Louis.

Jones developed the infection and swelling on Wednesday. It mostly afflicted "his lower body, primarily his right leg," said Miss Jones.

"The infection is affecting his kicking strokes," she said, noting that river pollution was suspected as the cause.

However, she added: "We're not sure what's causing it. He hasn't been to a doctor yet."

Jones, a native of LeMars, Iowa, and another physical fitness enthusiast, Wayne Thompson, 33, an insurance agent from Portland, Ore., started their adventure May 24. It is scheduled to end June 14 at the Golden Arch in St. Louis.

Jones, 5-foot-9 and 145 pounds, said the two men had been warned of river pollution at the start of their journey.

"We've received a few minor sores from the river, but otherwise no big effects from the pollution," Jones had said Tuesday — the day before his infection, including open sores, broke out.

Jones has written a recently-published book, "Quit is a Four-Letter Word."

"It's been selling good," Miss Jones said after the swimmers stopped for a reception here.

After being greeted by city and YMCA officials, the Marine Corps and a bicentennial committee, the men were to swim another 10 miles before stopping for the night.

They started the day below Cassville, Wis., and by noon had covered about 270 miles of their journey. They intended to swim as far as Bellevue, Iowa, on Thursday.

Accompaying the swimmers are Miss Jones, a 1976 graduate of Laurens, Iowa, High School, and Linda Jones, 28, wife of Capt. Jones.

"Alan circles check points on real good charts. We go to those check points, give the a little honey or fruit juice, make calls for them, find them at night and bring them back to a motel.

"Then we get up early each morning and take them back to the spot in the river where they left off."

In addition to river pollution, Jones said he and Thompson "had a couple of close calls from the barge traffic and had to scramble to get out of the way."

A recent poll conducted by Opinion Research Inc. may shed some light on the reasons why President Ford has been somewhat less than enthusiastic in publicly embracing the new Kissinger policy of all-out U.S. support for black Africa against white southern Africa.

On the specific issue of Rhodesia, the poll reported that only 18 per cent favored Kissinger's policy of "unrelenting opposition" to Rhodesia unless it surrenders power to the blacks; 9 per cent favored the present white government; but an impressive 66 per cent wanted no U.S. involvement at all. When asked if they would be in favor of halting U.S. imports of Rhodesian chrome, which is now permitted by the Byrd Amendment despite U.N. Sanctions, 72 per cent said no, against 14 per cent in favor.

These results indicate that the U.S. public is far from sold on the idea that the U.S. interest is best served by competing with our enemies in a campaign of subversion against our friends in southern Africa.

For this is exactly what the Ford-Kissinger policy now amounts to. Rhodesia is now under armed attack, principally from Soviet-armed guerrillas based in neighboring Mozambique. Their targets are not just whites, but peace-loving blacks who support, or at least refuse to fight against, the government of Ian Smith. The U.S. has, in effect, given its blessing to this action by praising Mozambique for closing its border with Rhodesia and by promising U.S. financial assistance to make up for any economic burden that this may cause to Mozambique.

And the Mozambique government with which we are thus allied in this shabby affair is itself a Marxist, totally black racist, police state in the most obnoxious and oppressive sense of that term. Personal freedoms are nonexistent. The methods of the mafia prevail.

A U.S. policy which makes common cause with such a regime is morally odious and pragmatically dangerous. These are not our friends and never will be.

The Soviet Union used its Cuban satellite to intervene successfully in Angola because the West in general and the U.S. in particular proved too confused and flabby to prevent it. Having thus failed to stand up to the Soviets (the fault lying primarily with Congress) Kissinger now seeks to compete with them in proving that we can be more anti-white than they, more synocpative to extremist African nationalism than they.

It is a shameful policy which derives from weakness rather than strenth. The common sense of the American people may be the only thing that will stop it.

TYRANNY'S STRANGE FASCINATION

Americans, who live in the oldest major democracy in the world and one of the last few still in working order, have always been strangely fascinated by tyranny. Maybe it's because tyrannies are so—well, "efficient."

In the 1930s, Charles Lindbergh, who should have known something about the indomitableness of the human spirit, advised Britain and France that they could not hope to win a war against resurgent Germany under the Nazis.

A decade earlier, journalist and social reformer Lincoln Steffens had visited the Soviet Union and returned saying, "I have seen the future and it works."

Now another American has returned from another budding tyranny, that of Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, and reports that he has seen the present and it is working in India —except for a few intellectuals, newspaper editors, opposition politicians and other dissenters who have borne the brunt of her "emergency" crackdown.

Even though foreign critics have called Mrs. Gandhi a dictator, "there is little doubt that the concept of the emergency has gained public acceptance in India," says Francis R. Valeo, Asian affairs expert and secretary of the U.S. Senate, who traveled recently on a fact-finding mission to India, Pakistan and Bangladesh at the request of Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield.

Foreign observers in India are unanimous, he says, in holding that Mrs. Gandhi would win a vote of confidence if elections were held at this time. But of course, elections are not going to be held at this time or at any other time in the foreseeable future.

What has Mrs. Gandhi done for India lately? According to Valeo:

"Inflation has been halted. Hoarders and speculators are disgorging their holdings and corruption has been curbed. Civil servants have become more attentive to public needs. Industry and labor seem to be responding to the government's pleading or pressure for increased output. Similarly, the railroads are providing better service."

Shades of II Duce, who made Italy's trains run on time.

Unquestionably, things were in terrible shape in India and called for drastic measures, just as they were and did in Russia in the 1920s and Germany, Italy and Spain in the 1930s and China, Vietnam, Korea, Cuba and etc., etc., etc., in the 1950 and 1960s.

Each of these new-borne tyrannies, including the "et-ceteras," has or had at one time its own lobby of champions in this country.

The 20th century's casualty list of peoples who have tried democracy and later abandoned it for tyranny, or who never tried democracy at all, does not make for comforting reading. Why any American should be the slightest bit enthusiastic that yet one more country has taken the autocratic route to solving its problems is difficult to understand.

DANGEROUS STATE OF EMERGENCY

The Wall Street Journal observes that President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared a national emergency in 1933. It has never been undeclared. Emergencies declared by President Truman and by President Nixon are still in effect also.

For the past year and a half, executive emergency powers have been under study by the Special Committee on the Termination of the National Emergency. As things now stand, the President of the United States, apparently, has the power to take all sorts of drastic action--including declaration of martial law, seizure of property, assignment of armed forces abroad and the organization and control of industrial production. The framework is in place to permit one-man rule of the United States. Now the Committee which has been studying the limits of presidential power has concluded that the existing states of national emergency, which have been declared, should be terminated and that in the future, emergencies should terminate in six months, unless Congress extends them.

Congress should clear the books and take back and exercise wisely its full share of the power, as well as the responsibility, for running the affairs of the country. If there is one thing the U.S. doesn't need, it is a dictatorship. So what's the use of leaving the blueprints for one lying around in the file drawers of the Executive Branch of the federal government?

ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN

"It can never happen here!" How often we hear that phrase when it is suggested that strict gun control laws can be a dangerous precedent, ultimately leading to even more federal monitoring of every aspect of our lives.

The truth of such warnings has been borne out in other nations--even West Germany where a representative form of government, not unlike ours, rules the people. The issue of gun control flared last year when Dr. Klaus Sojka, a Hamburg lawyer, challenged the legality of the West German Federal Gun Control Act in the Supreme Court. According to Dr. Sojka, the Act infringed upon his ability to possess firearms and to defend life and property. A German publication reports that under the Act, federal gun registration is mandatory, and all registered gun owners are subject to a federal background investigation of their trustworthiness and intended use of the firearms. It even went so far as to regulate toy guns, signal pistols and pyrotechnical devices!

As history has proven, strict regulation of law-abiding citizens can easily reach excessive levels, and with no appreciable drop in the crime rate. Here in the United States legislation such as the Gun Control Act of 1968 has been ineffective in stopping crime and theft of firearms. The message should be clear: punish the criminal element and leave the people's constitutional right to keep and bear arms intact.

BUSINESS ACTS TO STOP SLIPPED DISC

American companies dealing in substantial export business are worried about a slipping DISC. The initials in this case stand for "Domestic International Sales Corporation."

A bill passed by Congress in 1971, designed to encourage exports and help offset the tax advantages and subsidies foreign governments give their companies, allowed U.S. corporations to set up DISCs. Under the program, they can defer the taxes on a certain percentage of their profits generated by the overseas sales of products made in this country, so long as the profits are plowed back into export activities.

New legislation has been introduced in Congress, however, that would amend the DISC program and reduce the tax-break provisions. DISC opponents claim that the program cost the U.S. Treasury $1 billion in lost revenues last year.

Industry spokesmen counter that this revenue wasn't "lost"—it was deferred, or was more than recovered in other ways.

Some $1.6 billion in export sales was generated last year with the help of DISCs, they say. These sales meant more jobs for American workers and more tax revenues, both on the income earned by employes performing those jobs and on the income earned from the sales.

According to the director of international sales for one aerospace manufacturer, if his company's exports were to decrease by 10 per cent it would mean a drop of at least 1,000 in the number of its U.S. workers.

If the entire world practiced free trade, DISC would not be necessary, he adds. But the subsidies, tariffs and other restrictions enacted by other nations make free trade impossible. Their effect is to make U.S. products noncompetitive and to cost U.S. jobs. The DISC program is a mild U.S. reaction in the fact of what other nations do.

"The Treasury Department originally suggested DISC," he points out. "We think the Treasury Department knew what it was doing."

FOOD STAMP REFORM

THERE HAVE BEEN many complaints about the food stamp program.

Some have complained recipients abuse them, buying tobacco or beer—or even soap—with the food coupons. Some have objected to making stamps available to workers who go on strike. Others say they should not be available to students or to able-bodied persons who fail to hunt for work.

But it is not just the recipients who have been found to be abusing the program. Officials and contracting agencies which serve as money exchanges for dispensing the stamps also have been found to be channeling federal funds to their own uses.

And there are complaints, too, from consumers who find themselves at supermarket checkout counters waiting for cashiers to go through what appear to be unduly complicated procedures of checking sorted eligible and ineligible merchandise and collecting for and then making change in two currencies.

Recipients have had their gripes, too. One of their complaints is that they must come to the stamp issuing office with a sum of their own money to get their stamps. The stamps then represent not only their own cash but the "bonus" of varying sizes depending upon how much the government decides they are able to pay themselves. This has made it particularly difficult for those in the very worst financial straits, for it is those people who need food stamps most but find it most difficult to scrape up the basic cash amount each month in order to get their bonus stamps.

Congress is struggling with these problems now.

The question of eliminating the need for cash payments by recipients in order to get the bonus stamps has been a point of contention in the Senate. It is true that eliminating the purchase requirement would alter the character of the program. That requirement was written into the legislation originally to give assurance that participants would spend a reasonable portion of their own income on food.

There is a risk that removal of that requirement will result in food stamp recipients using their own money for beer or cigarets or other things, rather than for food. But the risk of that appears to be small. After all, the very poor still would be getting most of the stamps. And those who had a fair amount of cash and were getting only a modest number of stamps would be less likely to qualify under the proposed new regulations.

THE NEED clearly is to simplify the food stamp system, to reduce the chances of fraud all up and down the line. The proposed reforms appear to be moving in that direction.

Ultimately, of course, the entire welfare system needs to be revised so as to eliminate the need for any sort of food stamp program. But Congress has been dragging its feet on that idea for years.

ANOTHER MEMOIR

WASHINGTON— The little old lady came into my office clutching a yellow manuscript.

"I was wondering," she said in a tiny voice, "if these are worth anything?"

"What are they?"

"My memoirs. I was the mistress of Abraham Lincoln."

"Fantastic," I said. "Nobody knows Lincoln had a mistress."

"It's been my secret for 101 years," she said.

"Why are you revealing it now?"

"Everybody else seems to be talking about their affairs with the President, and I figured I might as well get into the act. President Lincoln and I were more than good friends."

"How good?"

"It's all in the book. We used to meet in the Lincoln Room any time Mary Todd was out of town."

"How did you meet him?"

"Through Frank Sinatra. We were introduced at a party in Chicago."

"Frank Sinatra the singer?" I asked in amazement.

"Not that Frank Sinatra, silly. Frank Sinatra was a colonel in the Illinois Regulars. I met him though Sam Giancana."

" Giancana, the Mafia boss?"

"No, stupid," she said. "Sam Giancana was in the War Department. I used to date him when I worked up on the Hill for Congressman Hays."

"Wayne Hays?"

'No, Rutherford B. Hayes. I couldn't type, but it didn't seem to matter because we didn't have typewriters then."

"Let's get back to Lincoln. You say you had an affair with him?"

"That's correct. He may have been in a wheelchair, but he was strong as an ox."

"Now wait a minute. Lincoln wasn't in a wheelchair. That was Franklin Delano Roosevelt."

"Are you sure?" she asked.

"I'm certain of it."

"Well, maybe it was Roosevelt then. He had a moustache and kept talking about San Juan Hill."

"That was Teddy Roosevelt, not Franklin Roosevelt. Lincoln was the one with the stovepipe hat and a beard."

"It's been so long ago it's hard for me to remember. I know he never wore a stovepipe hat when we had our affair. He told me once that he wouldn't be able to see me for a while because he was going to be impeached."

"The only Presidents who were going to be impeached were Andrew Johnson and Richard Nixon. It wasn't Richard Nixon, was it?"

"I should say not. I would never have had an affair with that man. He lied to the American people."

"Then it must have been Andrew Johnson."

"That's funny, I thought it was Lincoln. Do you think Frank Sinatra lied to me?"

"I wouldn't know."

"Well, whoever it was used to take me for long walks by the Tidal Basin."

"The Tidal Basin? Are you sure you didn't make all this up?"

"Cross my heart and hope to die," she said. "I was somebody's mistress and if it wasn't Lincoln, it was the fellow that came a few years later."

"General Grant? Did he drink a lot?"

"Yup. It's all in my memoirs. We used to drink and then we'd go up to the Lincoln Room. Maybe that's why I thought it was Lincoln--because of the name on the room. I remember he said his greatest dream was to return to his ranch on the Pedernales."

"Wow, you do have a story to tell."

"So you think someone might buy my memoirs?"

"Are you kidding? I know seven paperback houses that will give you $100,000 for them, without reading a chapter."

The little old lady said, "I'm not just doing it for the money. I'm doing it because I believe people should know what Abraham Lincoln really was like."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Oil Barons' Legislation
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON— With the arrogance of men accustomed to getting their way in Washington, the oil barons have written legislation to award themselves billions in offshore oil.

Their friends in Congress have introduced the giveaway bills as their own, often without changing a single word. We have compared legislation prepared by the oil industry with the actual bills in the legislative works. In some cases, not a comma has been disturbed.

The great offshore oil grab got as far as the House Outer Continental Shelf Committee. There, Chairman John Murphy, D.-N.Y., tried to head off the oil companies. He drafted a bill which would give the taxpayers a greater share of the offshore oil revenue and would protect the sea and shore life.

But he was deluged with amendments, which tied up his bill inside the committee for months. The amendments were introduced by Representatives Hamilton Fish Jr., R.-N.Y., Edwin Forsythe, R.-N.J., Charles Wiggins, R.-Calif., and to a lesser extent Don Young, R.-Alaska.

We have now learned that many of the amendments were prepared by the American Petroleum Institute and the oil companies it represents. A sheaf of amendments was quietly delivered to the committee's GOP staff by an Institute courier. Thereafter, Republican committee members dumped the amendments upon the committee, without a word to Chairman Murphy about their oily origins.

We have obtained copies of the amendments as they came out of the typewriters of the petroleum companies. It can be seen that some of the Republican congressmen, in theirhaste to oblige the oil crowd, submitted the legislation without even rephrasing it. In other cases, a word or two was changed, but the pro-oil slant was left intact.

During the wrangling behind closed doors, the committee accepted some of the crippling amendments and defeated others. But the effect was to weaken the bill, which finally was forwarded to the House Rules Committee.

The oil moguls, not satisfied with the sabotage job they had already achieved, sought to torpedo the Murphy measure entirely and thus eliminate the remaining pro-consumer features. This time they lined up the Ford Administration itself to work against the bill in the backrooms.

But a conscientious Administration official, who believed he should serve the public and not the oil industry, tipped off Murphy's staff as to what was happening. The secret plot was spelled out in a memo, written for Murphy's eyes only. The official, whose name we have withheld to save him from reprisals, stated "that the Administration had made a definite policy commitment to try to keep the Rules Committee from granting a rule."

Without a rule, the bill couldn't be taken up on the House floor. But there might be enough pressure from consumers to force the bill out of the Rules Committee in an election year. In this case, the official warned that the Administration planned to slap backs and twist arms in the House cloakrooms.

The object is to get enough votes against the measure on the House floor that "President Ford ... could veto the bill without fear of it being overridden."

One of the oil industry's most powerful backstage allies, said the memo, was Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe. Warned the memo: The Administration has been merely "stringing us along, trying to appear cooperative. But when passage of the bill appeared imminent, they decided to make the all-out effort to kill it."

Thus, the Ford Administration has made a secret pact with the American Petroleum Institute to block the bill, which would safeguard at least some of the public rights to the offshore oil billions. Their lobbyists, joined by lobbyists from Atlantic Richfield, Exxon, Mobil and offshore drillers, are busy buttonholing congressmen on Capitol Hill.

The oil lobby has also demonstrated its power on the Senate side of the Capitol. At the instigation of the oil boys, six senators huddled to hatch a "compromise" on natural gas price deregulation.

The oil states were represented by Senators Henry Bellmon, D.-Okla., Paul Fannin, R.-Ariz., and James Pearson, R.-Kan. Representing the consumers were Senators Fritz Hollings, D.-S.C., Warrene Magnuson, D.-Wash., and Adlai Stevenson, D.-Ill.

They emerged from the secret huddle with legislation that would permit the natural gas companies to triple the regulated price of newly drilled gas. The bill would also reclassify wells that are already producing as "new," thus allowing the price for this gas to soar from 35 cents to an incredible $1.35 per cubic foot.

It was a clear victory for the oil and gas industry. A confidential analysis, prepared by Michigan State professor David S. Schwartz at the request of Rep. John Moss, D.-Calif., estimates that the compromise legislation will cost utility users an additional $9 billion to $12.5 billion a year.

Footnote: The Republican congressmen, who introduced oil industry amendments without change, claimed that the legislation had been submitted to the staff and that they didn't realize it was the exact wordage of the oil operators. "Wedid not blindly accept anything from the industry," insisted Congressman Fish. Congressman Young, through a spokesman, added that the only industry bills he had supported were those which benefited Alaska.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Dream Ticket:
Kennedy eruption seen as Union's strategy to elect a labor president -- meaning HHH

WASHINGTON— As you watch Ted Kennedy play political touch football in the next few weeks, you may get a dose of deja vu. The Massachusetts Senator is running through a touched-up script originally developed for the Miami Democratic national nominating convention.

So it's 1972 revisited. Early in June of that year the game plan of the handful of men who run labor's central headquarters here hinged on a projected Humphrey-Kennedy ticket. The melancholy man from Minnesota would serve one term as President while Ted as Vice President got on-the-job training and refurbishing. Then in 1976 -- President.

There was one difficulty. Sen. George McGovern had most of the delegates lined up. But the tactic for stopping him after the first ballot was developed then. Just as it is now with Jimmy Carter as the man to stop. Labor's strategists were certain they had a smash-through plan. In mid-June 1972, Humphrey telephoned shore-to-ship to AFL-CIO leader George Meany, who hated McGovern as he does a bitten-through, stale cigar.

Meany was on the QE2 a day out of New York. At that time Sen. Humphrey told me, "I telephoned Mr. Meany to let him know that I intended to stay in this presidential thing right up to the convention and right through it; that I never intended to drop out despite the California primary results and never did I plan to quit. I wanted to know what Mr Meany's views were."

Meany replied he sure as hell wasn't for McGovern and, according to Humphrey, the labor chief's "only concern was, was I going to stay in? I assured him there was no doubt of it at all."

Later Meany was contacted by Ted Kennedy.

He told the chief of labor chiefs that he (Kennedy) was "ready and primed" to fight McGovern for the nomination if the union's high command could stonewall a first ballot win by he South Dakotan. An unimpeachable source says Meany promised to fight McGovern. Kennedy flew into Miami, had some hurried conversations, ralized it was hopeless, stayed long enough to rip the young delegates off their seats with something that sounded like "hello fellow lettuce boycotters" and join in a late late (about 2 a.m.) congratulatory round of peeches for the McGovern-Eagleton ticket, and flew home to await 1976.

This time he wasn-t going to be trapped. The new face, belonging to Jimmy (who?) Carter could roll up a sizeable bloc of delegates which Ted could take from him at the last moment, according to a source in the tight Kennedy camp.

Thus without running, and through a quiet deal with Carter, Kennedy could get caught in the draft, but not in the exposure of the primary wars.

So at a cocktail party and reception on April 13 in Atlanta, Ga., Kennedy opined that Carter would make a good President. And allowed that Humphrey was the party's elder statesman, and would have input on party philosophy.

But on May 25 in New York City Kennedy began ripping Carter's toga. Why the sudden shift? Who revised the script and why? Well, it was obvious that Carter had become the neo-McGovern. The fiasco of 1972 loomed like a Zeppelin in a one-car garage. From that point, according to two knowledgeable sources, the scenario was written by Al Barkan, Meany's director of political operations. One source is in the Kennedy milieu. The other is truly topside inside labor. I trust their knowledge. So I report their version of what developed:

Ted Kennedy has had considerable time to constantly review the political scene. His campaign for reelection in Massachusetts hardly is nerve-wracking.

With American presidencies, for the most part, running in two-term cycles, a Carter victory right down the line through November could mean eight years in the White House for the Georgian. By that time the base of power would swing from the Northeast-Southwest axis to the "unknown" Southeast. In eight years, Ted Kennedy would be just another "aging" Senator.

Better to team up with Humphrey, the labor strategists advised. If Carter could be stopped and the Minnesotan elected, the latter would stay one term and hand the next (1980) presidential nomination to him (Kennedy).

As in Miami, 1972, every effort would be made to stop the frontrunner. Then would come the big push against Carter by most of the mainstream forces: Ed Bennett Williams and Bob Strauss of the Democratic National Committee, labor (both sides), the minorities (who are for Humphrey and would grab at Ted), et al.

Thus the union chiefs would, in their vintage years, get a labor President into the White House, by following the touched-up script. Meaning Humphrey for whom they've fought since 1968. Of course, Jimmy Carter hasn't been heard from yet.

COMPETITIVE SUBVERSION

A recent poll conducted by Opinion Research Inc. may shed some light on the reasons why President Ford has been somewhat less than enthusiastic in publicly embracing the new Kissinger policy of all-out U.S. support for black Africa against white southern Africa.

On the specific issue of Rhodesia, the poll reported that only 18 per cent favored Kissinger's policy of "unrelenting opposition" to Rhodesia unless it surrenders power to the blacks; 9 per cent favored the present white government; but an impressive 66 per cent wanted no U.S. involvement at all. When asked if they would be in favor of halting U.S. imports of Rhodesian chrome, which is now permitted by the Byrd Amendment despite U.N. Sanctions, 72 per cent said no, against 14 per cent in favor.

These results indicate that the U.S. public is far from sold on the idea that the U.S. interest is best served by competing with our enemies in a campaign of subversion against our friends in southern Africa.

For this is exactly what the Ford-Kissinger policy now amounts to. Rhodesia is now under armed attack, principally from Soviet-armed guerrillas based in neighboring Mozambique. Their targets are not just whites, but peace-loving blacks who support, or at least refuse to fight against, the government of Ian Smith. The U.S. has, in effect, given its blessing to this action by praising Mozambique for closing its border with Rhodesia and by promising U.S. financial assistance to make up for any economic burden that this may cause to Mozambique.

And the Mozambique government with which we are thus allied in this shabby affair is itself a Marxist, totally black racist, police state in the most obnoxious and oppressive sense of that term. Personal freedoms are nonexistent. The methods of the mafia prevail.

A U.S. policy which makes common cause with such a regime is morally odious and pragmatically dangerous. These are not our friends and never will be.

The Soviet Union used its Cuban satellite to intervene successfully in Angola because the West in general and the U.S. in particular proved too confused and flabby to prevent it. Having thus failed to stand up to the Soviets (the fault lying primarily with Congress) Kissinger now seeks to compete with them in proving that we can be more anti-white than they, more synocpative to extremist African nationalism than they.

It is a shameful policy which derives from weakness rather than strenth. The common sense of the American people may be the only thing that will stop it.

TYRANNY'S STRANGE FASCINATION

Americans, who live in the oldest major democracy in the world and one of the last few still in working order, have always been strangely fascinated by tyranny. Maybe it's because tyrannies are so—well, "efficient."

In the 1930s, Charles Lindbergh, who should have known something about the indomitableness of the human spirit, advised Britain and France that they could not hope to win a war against resurgent Germany under the Nazis.

A decade earlier, journalist and social reformer Lincoln Steffens had visited the Soviet Union and returned saying, "I have seen the future and it works."

Now another American has returned from another budding tyranny, that of Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, and reports that he has seen the present and it is working in India —except for a few intellectuals, newspaper editors, opposition politicians and other dissenters who have borne the brunt of her "emergency" crackdown.

Even though foreign critics have called Mrs. Gandhi a dictator, "there is little doubt that the concept of the emergency has gained public acceptance in India," says Francis R. Valeo, Asian affairs expert and secretary of the U.S. Senate, who traveled recently on a fact-finding mission to India, Pakistan and Bangladesh at the request of Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield.

Foreign observers in India are unanimous, he says, in holding that Mrs. Gandhi would win a vote of confidence if elections were held at this time. But of course, elections are not going to be held at this time or at any other time in the foreseeable future.

What has Mrs. Gandhi done for India lately? According to Valeo:

"Inflation has been halted. Hoarders and speculators are disgorging their holdings and corruption has been curbed. Civil servants have become more attentive to public needs. Industry and labor seem to be responding to the government's pleading or pressure for increased output. Similarly, the railroads are providing better service."

Shades of II Duce, who made Italy's trains run on time.

Unquestionably, things were in terrible shape in India and called for drastic measures, just as they were and did in Russia in the 1920s and Germany, Italy and Spain in the 1930s and China, Vietnam, Korea, Cuba and etc., etc., etc., in the 1950 and 1960s.

Each of these new-borne tyrannies, including the "et-ceteras," has or had at one time its own lobby of champions in this country.

The 20th century's casualty list of peoples who have tried democracy and later abandoned it for tyranny, or who never tried democracy at all, does not make for comforting reading. Why any American should be the slightest bit enthusiastic that yet one more country has taken the autocratic route to solving its problems is difficult to understand.

DANGEROUS STATE OF EMERGENCY

The Wall Street Journal observes that President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared a national emergency in 1933. It has never been undeclared. Emergencies declared by President Truman and by President Nixon are still in effect also.

For the past year and a half, executive emergency powers have been under study by the Special Committee on the Termination of the National Emergency. As things now stand, the President of the United States, apparently, has the power to take all sorts of drastic action--including declaration of martial law, seizure of property, assignment of armed forces abroad and the organization and control of industrial production. The framework is in place to permit one-man rule of the United States. Now the Committee which has been studying the limits of presidential power has concluded that the existing states of national emergency, which have been declared, should be terminated and that in the future, emergencies should terminate in six months, unless Congress extends them.

Congress should clear the books and take back and exercise wisely its full share of the power, as well as the responsibility, for running the affairs of the country. If there is one thing the U.S. doesn't need, it is a dictatorship. So what's the use of leaving the blueprints for one lying around in the file drawers of the Executive Branch of the federal government?

ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN

"It can never happen here!" How often we hear that phrase when it is suggested that strict gun control laws can be a dangerous precedent, ultimately leading to even more federal monitoring of every aspect of our lives.

The truth of such warnings has been borne out in other nations--even West Germany where a representative form of government, not unlike ours, rules the people. The issue of gun control flared last year when Dr. Klaus Sojka, a Hamburg lawyer, challenged the legality of the West German Federal Gun Control Act in the Supreme Court. According to Dr. Sojka, the Act infringed upon his ability to possess firearms and to defend life and property. A German publication reports that under the Act, federal gun registration is mandatory, and all registered gun owners are subject to a federal background investigation of their trustworthiness and intended use of the firearms. It even went so far as to regulate toy guns, signal pistols and pyrotechnical devices!

As history has proven, strict regulation of law-abiding citizens can easily reach excessive levels, and with no appreciable drop in the crime rate. Here in the United States legislation such as the Gun Control Act of 1968 has been ineffective in stopping crime and theft of firearms. The message should be clear: punish the criminal element and leave the people's constitutional right to keep and bear arms intact.

BUSINESS ACTS TO STOP SLIPPED DISC

American companies dealing in substantial export business are worried about a slipping DISC. The initials in this case stand for "Domestic International Sales Corporation."

A bill passed by Congress in 1971, designed to encourage exports and help offset the tax advantages and subsidies foreign governments give their companies, allowed U.S. corporations to set up DISCs. Under the program, they can defer the taxes on a certain percentage of their profits generated by the overseas sales of products made in this country, so long as the profits are plowed back into export activities.

New legislation has been introduced in Congress, however, that would amend the DISC program and reduce the tax-break provisions. DISC opponents claim that the program cost the U.S. Treasury $1 billion in lost revenues last year.

Industry spokesmen counter that this revenue wasn't "lost"—it was deferred, or was more than recovered in other ways.

Some $1.6 billion in export sales was generated last year with the help of DISCs, they say. These sales meant more jobs for American workers and more tax revenues, both on the income earned by employes performing those jobs and on the income earned from the sales.

According to the director of international sales for one aerospace manufacturer, if his company's exports were to decrease by 10 per cent it would mean a drop of at least 1,000 in the number of its U.S. workers.

If the entire world practiced free trade, DISC would not be necessary, he adds. But the subsidies, tariffs and other restrictions enacted by other nations make free trade impossible. Their effect is to make U.S. products noncompetitive and to cost U.S. jobs. The DISC program is a mild U.S. reaction in the fact of what other nations do.

"The Treasury Department originally suggested DISC," he points out. "We think the Treasury Department knew what it was doing."

FOOD STAMP REFORM

THERE HAVE BEEN many complaints about the food stamp program.

Some have complained recipients abuse them, buying tobacco or beer—or even soap—with the food coupons. Some have objected to making stamps available to workers who go on strike. Others say they should not be available to students or to able-bodied persons who fail to hunt for work.

But it is not just the recipients who have been found to be abusing the program. Officials and contracting agencies which serve as money exchanges for dispensing the stamps also have been found to be channeling federal funds to their own uses.

And there are complaints, too, from consumers who find themselves at supermarket checkout counters waiting for cashiers to go through what appear to be unduly complicated procedures of checking sorted eligible and ineligible merchandise and collecting for and then making change in two currencies.

Recipients have had their gripes, too. One of their complaints is that they must come to the stamp issuing office with a sum of their own money to get their stamps. The stamps then represent not only their own cash but the "bonus" of varying sizes depending upon how much the government decides they are able to pay themselves. This has made it particularly difficult for those in the very worst financial straits, for it is those people who need food stamps most but find it most difficult to scrape up the basic cash amount each month in order to get their bonus stamps.

Congress is struggling with these problems now.

The question of eliminating the need for cash payments by recipients in order to get the bonus stamps has been a point of contention in the Senate. It is true that eliminating the purchase requirement would alter the character of the program. That requirement was written into the legislation originally to give assurance that participants would spend a reasonable portion of their own income on food.

There is a risk that removal of that requirement will result in food stamp recipients using their own money for beer or cigarets or other things, rather than for food. But the risk of that appears to be small. After all, the very poor still would be getting most of the stamps. And those who had a fair amount of cash and were getting only a modest number of stamps would be less likely to qualify under the proposed new regulations.

THE NEED clearly is to simplify the food stamp system, to reduce the chances of fraud all up and down the line. The proposed reforms appear to be moving in that direction.

Ultimately, of course, the entire welfare system needs to be revised so as to eliminate the need for any sort of food stamp program. But Congress has been dragging its feet on that idea for years.

ANOTHER MEMOIR

WASHINGTON— The little old lady came into my office clutching a yellow manuscript.

"I was wondering," she said in a tiny voice, "if these are worth anything?"

"What are they?"

"My memoirs. I was the mistress of Abraham Lincoln."

"Fantastic," I said. "Nobody knows Lincoln had a mistress."

"It's been my secret for 101 years," she said.

"Why are you revealing it now?"

"Everybody else seems to be talking about their affairs with the President, and I figured I might as well get into the act. President Lincoln and I were more than good friends."

"How good?"

"It's all in the book. We used to meet in the Lincoln Room any time Mary Todd was out of town."

"How did you meet him?"

"Through Frank Sinatra. We were introduced at a party in Chicago."

"Frank Sinatra the singer?" I asked in amazement.

"Not that Frank Sinatra, silly. Frank Sinatra was a colonel in the Illinois Regulars. I met him though Sam Giancana."

"Giancana, the Mafia boss?"

"No, stupid," she said. "Sam Giancana was in the War Department. I used to date him when I worked up on the Hill for Congressman Hays."

"Wayne Hays?"

'No, Rutherford B. Hayes. I couldn't type, but it didn't seem to matter because we didn't have typewriters then."

"Let's get back to Lincoln. You say you had an affair with him?"

"That's correct. He may have been in a wheelchair, but he was strong as an ox."

"Now wait a minute. Lincoln wasn't in a wheelchair. That was Franklin Delano Roosevelt."

"Are you sure?" she asked.

"I'm certain of it."

"Well, maybe it was Roosevelt then. He had a moustache and kept talking about San Juan Hill."

"That was Teddy Roosevelt, not Franklin Roosevelt. Lincoln was the one with the stovepipe hat and a beard."

"It's been so long ago it's hard for me to remember. I know he never wore a stovepipe hat when we had our affair. He told me once that he wouldn't be able to see me for a while because he was going to be impeached."

"The only Presidents who were going to be impeached were Andrew Johnson and Richard Nixon. It wasn't Richard Nixon, was it?"

"I should say not. I would never have had an affair with that man. He lied to the American people."

"Then it must have been Andrew Johnson."

"That's funny, I thought it was Lincoln. Do you think Frank Sinatra lied to me?"

"I wouldn't know."

"Well, whoever it was used to take me for long walks by the Tidal Basin."

"The Tidal Basin? Are you sure you didn't make all this up?"

"Cross my heart and hope to die," she said. "I was somebody's mistress and if it wasn't Lincoln, it was the fellow that came a few years later."

"General Grant? Did he drink a lot?"

"Yup. It's all in my memoirs. We used to drink and then we'd go up to the Lincoln Room. Maybe that's why I thought it was Lincoln–because of the name on the room. I remember he said his greatest dream was to return to his ranch on the Pedernales."

"So you think someone might buy my memoirs?"

"Are you kidding? I know seven paperback houses that will give you $100,000 for them, without reading a chapter."

The little old lady said, "I'm not just doing it for the money. I'm doing it because I believe people should know what Abraham Lincoln really was like."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Oil Barons' Legislation
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON— With the arrogance of men accustomed to getting their way in Washington, the oil barons have written legislation to award themselves billions in offshore oil.

Their friends in Congress have introduced the giveaway bills as their own, often without changing a single word. We have compared legislation prepared by the oil industry with the actual bills in the legislative works. In some cases, not a comma has been disturbed.

The great offshore oil grab got as far as the House Outer Continental Shelf Committee. There, Chairman John Murphy, D.-N.Y., tried to head off the oil companies. He drafted a bill which would give the taxpayers a greater share of the offshore oil revenue and would protect the sea and shore life.

But he was deluged with amendments, which tied up his bill inside the committee for months. The amendments were introduced by Representatives Hamilton Fish Jr., R.-N.Y., Edwin Forsythe, R.-N.J., Charles Wiggins, R.-Calif., and to a lesser extent Don Young, R.-Alaska.

We have now learned that many of the amendments were prepared by the American Petroleum Institute and the oil companies it represents. A sheaf of amendments was quietly delivered to the committee's GOP staff by an Institute courier. Thereafter, Republican committee members dumped the amendments upon the committee, without a word to Chairman Murphy about their oily origins.

We have obtained copies of the amendments as they came out of the typewriters of the petroleum companies. It can be seen that some of the Republican congressmen, in theirhaste to oblige the oil crowd, submitted the legislation without even rephrasing it. In other cases, a word or two was changed, but the pro-oil slant was left intact.

During the wrangling behind closed doors, the committee accepted some of the crippling amendments and defeated others. But the effect was to weaken the bill, which finally was forwarded to the House Rules Committee.

The oil moguls, not satisfied with the sabotage job they had already achieved, sought to torpedo the Murphy measure entirely and thus eliminate the remaining pro-consumer features. This time they lined up the Ford Administration itself to work against the bill in the backrooms.

But a conscientious Administration official, who believed he should serve the public and not the oil industry, tipped off Murphy's staff as to what was happening. The secret plot was spelled out in a memo, written for Murphy's eyes only. The official, whose name we have withheld to save him from reprisals, stated "that the Administration had made a definite policy commitment to try to keep the Rules Committee from granting a rule."

Without a rule, the bill couldn't be taken up on the House floor. But there might be enough pressure from consumers to force the bill out of the Rules Committee in an election year. In this case, the official warned that the Administration planned to slap backs and twist arms in the House cloakrooms.

The object is to get enough votes against the measure on the House floor that "President Ford ... could veto the bill without fear of it being overridden."

One of the oil industry's most powerful backstage allies, said the memo, was Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe. Warned the memo: The Administration has been merely "stringing us along, trying to appear cooperative. But when passage of the bill appeared imminent, they decided to make the all-out effort to kill it."

Thus, the Ford Administration has made a secret pact with the American Petroleum Institute to block the bill, which would safeguard at least some of the public rights to the offshore oil billions. Their lobbyists, joined by lobbyists from Atlantic Richfield, Exxon, Mobil and offshore drillers, are busy buttonholing congressmen on Capitol Hill.

The oil lobby has also demonstrated its power on the Senate side of the Capitol. At the instigation of the oil boys, six senators huddled to hatch a "compromise" on natural gas price deregulation.

The oil states were represented by Senators Henry Bellmon, D.-Okla., Paul Fannin, R.-Ariz., and James Pearson, R.-Kan. Representing the consumers were Senators Fritz Hollings, D.-S.C., Warrene Magnuson, D.-Wash., and Adlai Stevenson, D.-Ill.

They emerged from the secret huddle with legislation that would permit the natural gas companies to triple the regulated price of newly drilled gas. The bill would also reclassify wells that are already producing as "new," thus allowing the price for this gas to soar from 35 cents to an incredible $1.35 per cubic foot.

It was a clear victory for the oil and gas industry. A confidential analysis, prepared by Michigan State professor David S. Schwartz at the request of Rep. John Moss, D.-Calif., estimates that the compromise legislation will cost utility users an additional $9 billion to $12.5 billion a year.

Footnote: The Republican congressmen, who introduced oil industry amendments without change, claimed that the legislation had been submitted to the staff and that they didn't realize it was the exact wordage of the oil operators. "Wedid not blindly accept anything from the industry," insisted Congressman Fish. Congressman Young, through a spokesman, added that the only industry bills he had supported were those which benefited Alaska.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Dream Ticket:
Kennedy eruption seen as Union's strategy to elect a labor president -- meaning HHH

WASHINGTON— As you watch Ted Kennedy play political touch football in the next few weeks, you may get a dose of deja vu. The Massachusetts Senator is running through a touched-up script originally developed for the Miami Democratic national nominating convention.

So it's 1972 revisited. Early in June of that year the game plan of the handful of men who run labor's central headquarters here hinged on a projected Humphrey-Kennedy ticket. The melancholy man from Minnesota would serve one term as President while Ted as Vice President got on-the-job training and refurbishing. Then in 1976 -- President.

There was one difficulty. Sen. George McGovern had most of the delegates lined up. But the tactic for stopping him after the first ballot was developed then. Just as it is now with Jimmy Carter as the man to stop. Labor's strategists were certain they had a smash-through plan. In mid-June 1972, Humphrey telephoned shore-to-ship to AFL-CIO leader George Meany, who hated McGovern as he does a bitten-through, stale cigar.

Meany was on the QE2 a day out of New York. At that time Sen. Humphrey told me, "I telephoned Mr. Meany to let him know that I intended to stay in this presidential thing right up to the convention and right through it; that I never intended to drop out despite the California primary results and never did I plan to quit. I wanted to know what Mr Meany's views were."

Meany replied he sure as hell wasn't for McGovern and, according to Humphrey, the labor chief's "only concern was, was I going to stay in? I assured him there was no doubt of it at all."

Later Meany was contacted by Ted Kennedy.

He told the chief of labor chiefs that he (Kennedy) was "ready and primed" to fight McGovern for the nomination if the union's high command could stonewall a first ballot win by he South Dakotan. An unimpeachable source says Meany promised to fight McGovern. Kennedy flew into Miami, had some hurried conversations, ralized it was hopeless, stayed long enough to rip the young delegates off their seats with something that sounded like "hello fellow lettuce boycotters" and join in a late late (about 2 a.m.) congratulatory round of peeches for the McGovern-Eagleton ticket, and flew home to await 1976.

This time he wasn-t going to be trapped. The new face, belonging to Jimmy (who?) Carter could roll up a sizeable bloc of delegates which Ted could take from him at the last moment, according to a source in the tight Kennedy camp.

Thus without running, and through a quiet deal with Carter, Kennedy could get caught in the draft, but not in the exposure of the primary wars.

So at a cocktail party and reception on April 13 in Atlanta, Ga., Kennedy opined that Carter would make a good President. And allowed that Humphrey was the party's elder statesman, and would have input on party philosophy.

But on May 25 in New York City Kennedy began ripping Carter's toga. Why the sudden shift? Who revised the script and why? Well, it was obvious that Carter had become the neo-McGovern. The fiasco of 1972 loomed like a Zeppelin in a one-car garage. From that point, according to two knowledgeable sources, the scenario was written by Al Barkan, Meany's director of political operations. One source is in the Kennedy milieu. The other is truly topside inside labor. I trust their knowledge. So I report their version of what developed:

Ted Kennedy has had considerable time to constantly review the political scene. His campaign for reelection in Massachusetts hardly is nerve-wracking.

With American presidencies, for the most part, running in two-term cycles, a Carter victory right down the line through November could mean eight years in the White House for the Georgian. By that time the base of power would swing from the Northeast-Southwest axis to the "unknown" Southeast. In eight years, Ted Kennedy would be just another "aging" Senator.

Better to team up with Humphrey, the labor strategists advised. If Carter could be stopped and the Minnesotan elected, the latter would stay one term and hand the next (1980) presidential nomination to him (Kennedy).

As in Miami, 1972, every effort would be made to stop the frontrunner. Then would come the big push against Carter by most of the mainstream forces: Ed Bennett Williams and Bob Strauss of the Democratic National Committee, labor (both sides), the minorities (who are for Humphrey and would grab at Ted), et al.

Thus the union chiefs would, in their vintage years, get a labor President into the White House, by following the touched-up script. Meaning Humphrey for whom they've fought since 1968. Of course, Jimmy Carter hasn't been heard from yet.

Only all-student circus travels to performances in nine states

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's a little unusual to find a young woman clown who is also a practicing electrician or another, a chemical engineering student, delivering a circus bally or spiel.

This is Circus Kirk, which bills itself as the only all-student tented circus, which plans more than 180 one-night performances in nine states this summer.

"It's as though I were giving a course in Circus 101 — freshman circus," says Charles W. Boas, the college professor who is its owner and manager. "This is a gruelling pace, but we break into it gradually."

He said, "There's a daily challenge in which there are immediate goals and satisfactions. We do not have the caste system that exists in other circuses — here everybody has a job. We place a good deal of responsibility on the individual, and along about the second week things fall into place."

The performers are their own roustabouts — putting up the big top and other tents, assembling the bleachers, caring for the animals, hooking up the lights and public address systems and a host of other logistical chores.

When the evening performance is over the young people sleep in bunks in big trailer trucks and then start over early the next morning to do it all again.

Boas, a professor of geography at the College of York of Pennsylvania, is a lifelong buff who has worked in major circuses. He started his present venture on a small scale in 1968, now has an impressive array of equipment.

There are about 17 vehicles, from tractor trailers to station wagons and trailers, to transport the 50 members of the troupe — high school and college students, the oldest 27.

This year's tour started May 22 in Hanover, Pa. After playing at six sites in the capital area, the circus moves on to Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New England and back to Pennsylvania to wind up the season on Labor Day.

It is booked for benefits such as booster clubs and Jaycees, which pay a fee and hope to make a profit from ticket sales. It has an annual budget of about $250,000. "It costs us $2,500 a day to keep it on the road;" Boas said in an interview. "Insurance, food, fuel; $11 a mile just to move the show."

The student performers receive a minimum of $50 a week, plus meals, lodging, transportation, wardrobe uniforms. Some of them are also receiving credits through York College for intern work in their special fields.

Headquarters is at a seven-acre farm at East Berlin, Pa., a small town between York and Gettysburg. There the equipment is stored and the animals are housed in the off-season.

CHICAGO (AP) — A first edition book does not necessarily have special value.

The American Library Assn. says, "Indeed, for the majority of books, the first edition was the only edition. First printings of great works of literature, art, and science are usually sought by collectors, but scarcity and market demand determine the value."

Ford asks for busing legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford may ask Congress to create a national council that would negotiate local school desegregation plans in an effort to avoid court-ordered busing.

The proposed legislation also would place new restrictions on federal judges and could rule out city-wide integration plans in some cases.

Ford expects to decide "as soon as possible" on details of the legislative proposal he has promised to send Congress, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Wednesday.

The President, his key aides and three Cabinet members discussed the legislative plan in a 90-minute session Wednesday. "There were no decisions made at the meeting," Nessen said.

Nessen said Ford plans to talk with civil rights and congressional leaders before reaching a final decision.

The Wednesday meeting focused on draft legislation prepared by Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi and the Justice Department and other proposals offered by David Mathews, secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Labor Secretary W.J. Usery also attended the session.

The legislation would establish a national council to mediate desegregation disputes in local communities, a Justice Department official said. The make-up of such a council was not learned but at least some members would be appointed by the president.

The proposal is designed to help community leaders reach voluntary desegregation plans before a federal court imposes a mandatory plan.

Without disclosing details, Nessen said Mathews outlined for Ford several approaches to help local school districts "avoid reaching the point at which the court steps in and orders massive busing."

The other major feature of the proposed legislation is the new restriction on federal judges.

The plan would require the courts to determine how much segregation was caused by official government acts, such as maintaining separate schools for black students or drawing district boundaries in a way that guarantees segregated schools.

Official government acts of discrimination are clearly illegal.

The courts would be free to use whatever remedies they considered necessary to correct any segregation caused by official acts. This would include busing, which the Supreme Court listed as a "permissible tool" of desegregation in a landmark 1971 decision.

The plan would allow a court to impose desegregation remedies, including widespread busing, throughout a city and its suburbs only if the court concluded that illegal government discrimination caused area-wide segregation.

But the court could not impose city-wide desegregation plans to correct segregation resulting from housing patterns. The department proposal would apply this rule whether or not busing was involved.

Congress must OK closings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate-House conference committee has agreed on legislation providing no military base could be closed without approval of Congress.

"I'm very pleased because this insures the perpetuation of Richards-Gebaur Air Force Base for Kansas City, the Air Force and national security," said Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., Wednesday.

The restrictive language was agreed on unanimously by members of the conference committee on the military construction authorization bill.

The restriction would be effective until 1981, and would apply to any base where the Defense Department proposes to cut more than 1,000 civilian employes or more than 50 per cent of the number of workers on a base.

The Air Force has proposed that the Air Force Communications Center be moved from Richards-Gebaur to Scott Air Force Base, Belleville, Ill., and the 1840th be inactivated.

Those actions would result in elimination of 1,420 civilian jobs and transfer or elimination of 2,420 military positions.

The Air Force said the changes would result in a savings of $26 million annually.

The proposed legislation will have to be approved by the House and Senate.

Merchant meeting

Sikeston retail merchants met Wednesday night for a dinner and business meeting called to plan Value Day promotions. The merchants purchased a $400 television advertising campaign with WPSD-TV in Paducah, Ky., to publicize the sales promotion observed on the second Wednesday of each month. The next Value Day sale will be held next Wednesday. (Daily Standard Photo)

Ford asks for busing legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford may ask Congress to create a national council that would negotiate local school desegregation plans in an effort to avoid court-ordered busing.

The proposed legislation also would place new restrictions on federal judges and could rule out city-wide integration plans in some cases.

Ford expects to decide "as soon as possible" on details of the legislative proposal he has promised to send Congress, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Wednesday.

The President, his key aides and three Cabinet members discussed the legislative plan in a 90-minute session Wednesday. "There were no decisions made at the meeting," Nessen said.

Nessen said Ford plans to talk with civil rights and congressional leaders before reaching a final decision.

The Wednesday meeting focused on draft legislation prepared by Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi and the Justice Department and other proposals offered by David Mathews, secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Labor Secretary W.J. Usery also attended the session.

The legislation would establish a national council to mediate desegregation disputes in local communities, a Justice Department official said. The make-up of such a council was not learned but at least some members would be appointed by the president.

The proposal is designed to help community leaders reach voluntary desegregation plans before a federal court imposes a mandatory plan.

Without disclosing details, Nessen said Mathews outlined for Ford several approaches to help local school districts "avoid reaching the point at which the court steps in and orders massive busing."

The other major feature of the proposed legislation is the new restriction on federal judges.

The plan would require the courts to determine how much segregation was caused by official government acts, such as maintaining separate schools for black students or drawing district boundaries in a way that guarantees segregated schools.

Official government acts of discrimination are clearly illegal.

The courts would be free to use whatever remedies they considered necessary to correct any segregation caused by official acts. This would include busing, which the Supreme Court listed as a "permissible tool" of desegregation in a landmark 1971 decision.

The plan would allow a court to impose desegregation remedies, including widespread busing, throughout a city and its suburbs only if the court concluded that illegal government discrimination caused area-wide segregation.

But the court could not impose city-wide desegregation plans to correct segregation resulting from housing patterns. The department proposal would apply this rule whether or not busing was involved.

Congress must OK closings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate-House conference committee has agreed on legislation providing no military base could be closed without approval of Congress.

"I'm very pleased because this insures the perpetuation of Richards-Gebaur Air Force Base for Kansas City, the Air Force and national security," said Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., Wednesday.

The restrictive language was agreed on unanimously by members of the conference committee on the military construction authorization bill.

The restriction would be effective until 1981, and would apply to any base where the Defense Department proposes to cut more than 1,000 civilian employes or more than 50 per cent of the number of workers on a base.

The Air Force has proposed that the Air Force Communications Center be moved from Richards-Gebaur to Scott Air Force Base, Belleville, Ill., and the 1840th be inactivated.

Those actions would result in elimination of 1,420 civilian jobs and transfer or elimination of 2,420 military positions.

The Air Force said the changes would result in a savings of $26 million annually.

The proposed legislation will have to be approved by the House and Senate.

Only all-student circus travels to performances in nine states

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's a little unusual to find a young woman clown who is also a practicing electrician or another, a chemical engineering student, delivering a circus bally or spiel.

This is Circus Kirk, which bills itself as the only all-student tented circus, which plans more than 180 one-night performances in nine states this summer.

"It's as though I were giving a course in Circus 101 — freshman circus," says Charles W. Boas, the college professor who is its owner and manager. "This is a gruelling pace, but we break into it gradually."

He said, "There's a daily challenge in which there are immediate goals and satisfactions. We do not have the caste system that exists in other circuses — here everybody has a job. We place a good deal of responsibility on the individual, and along about the second week things fall into place."

The performers are their own roustabouts — putting up the big top and other tents, assembling the bleachers, caring for the animals, hooking up the lights and public address systems and a host of other logistical chores.

When the evening performance is over the young people sleep in bunks in big trailer trucks and then start over early the next morning to do it all again.

Boas, a professor of geography at the College of York of Pennsylvania, is a lifelong buff who has worked in major circuses. He started his present venture on a small scale in 1968, now has an impressive array of equipment.

There are about 17 vehicles, from tractor trailers to station wagons and trailers, to transport the 50 members of the troupe — high school and college students, the oldest 27.

This year's tour started May 22 in Hanover, Pa. After playing at six sites in the capital area, the circus moves on to Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New England and back to Pennsylvania to wind up the season on Labor Day.

It is booked for benefits such as booster clubs and Jaycees, which pay a fee and hope to make a profit from ticket sales. It has an annual budget of about $250,000. "It costs us $2,500 a day to keep it on the road," Boas said in an interview. "Insurance, food, fuel; $11 a mile just to move the show."

The student performers receive a minimum of $50 a week, plus meals, lodging, transportation, wardrobe uniforms. Some of them are also receiving credits through York College for intern work in their special fields.

Headquarters is at a seven-acre farm at East Berlin, Pa., a small town between York and Gettysburg. There the equipment is stored and the animals are housed in the off-season.

CHICAGO (AP) — A first edition book does not necessarily have special value.

The American Library Assn. says, "Indeed, for the majority of books, the first edition was the only edition. First printings of great works of literature, art, and science are usually sought by collectors, but scarcity and market demand determine the value."

Walters winds up 'Today'

NEW YORK (AP) — Barbara Walters, who starts working at ABC Sept. 20 as the first and best-paid female coanchor of a nightly network news show, made her last live appearance on NBC's "Today" program today.

On Friday, she'll appear only on tape in a salute to her native Massachusetts. By then, she'll be savoring the luxury of no more predawn wakeups for a while and getting set for her new life at her new network at a reported pay of $1 million a year for five years.

While declining to reveal the total amount of loot ABC will pay her, Miss Walters, an on-air member of "Today" since 1963, has said the money NBC offered her to stay was the same as that offered by ABC.

So she was asked in an interview this week if the primary reason she decided last April to join ABC was the immediate and historic prospect of becoming the first woman to regularly anchor network news.

"I think that really had a great deal to do with it," said Miss Walters, 44. "If you had to say that was the major reason, yes, it was."

She also predicted that within the next two years CBS and NBC also will have female coanchors when the networks expand their evening news shows from the current half-hour each night to 45 minutes or an hour.

"And I hope they will get only good publicity," she said, alluding to the oft-severe criticism within and outside the industry that has attended her multimillion-dollar shift of networks.

She said she thinks much of the criticism is due to a misunderstanding, to an erroneous impression she's getting a cool million a year simply to coanchor the "ABC Evening News" with Harry Reasoner.

"So may I point out," she said, and not sarcastically, "what has not been publicized — that I'll be earning approximately the same money as my fellow anchormen" for coanchoring a weeknight news show.

The same money is believed in the $450,000-$500,000 range.

"The extra money," she said, referring to the balance of her yearly salary, "comes from the extra assignments I have that they do not have — four one-hour specials, 12 half-hour Sunday shows and documentaries, plus other contributions to the evening news program."

She sid she didn't demand the money, "it was offered me. It's the American way not to turn down a raise. Indeed, I doubt if any of my fellow newsmen will turn down raises in the future."

"If anything, I think they will ask for and receive more money. It just won't be publicized."

Miss Walters, who said she can't debate why television journalists get more money than print types, said despite what she'll earn "my integrity and dedication to my work remains the same."

Ann Landers

Son-in-law treats her well

Dear Ann Landers: A while back I read the letter from the woman who is the only one who goes to visit her mother in the convalescent home. Her sister and brother "can't stand the smell." Her brothers says, "It's depressing to see all those old people."

I'll go you one better. My mother is 80 and lives in her own little home. Her house smells just fine and she is always bright and cheerful. My brother lives right next door and stops in once or twice a month for a brief visit. Her other son lives 15 minutes away. Same story.

They never offer to mow the lawn, run an errand or fix anything around her home. Her son-in-law (my husband, age 60, does everything. My brothers (not yet 50) both run to the altar rail every Sunday and consider themselves fine Christians.

Care to comment? -- A Sister

Dear Sis: Why bother? They aren't worth the space to tell them off. That husband of yours sounds like a peach. Give him a big hug for me. He's my kind of guy.

Dear Ann Landers: The man I was engaged to marry has decided he isn't ready to give up his freedom. We went together for two and a half years. My whole life revolved around him. How will I face my family and friends? I think I'd rather die.

I already quit my job to prepare for the wedding. I was living for the day when I could stay home and be a 100 per cent wife and mother. My world has collapsed. I had great faith in the Lord, was active in our church and taught Bible classes. Now I'm beginning to doubt everything I once believed in.

Please help me think straight, Ann. I'm -- Hanging By A Thread

Dear Friend: Get your Bible out and read about Elijah in Kings 1:19. Elijah was so dejected he asked God to take his life.

God suggested three things:

(1) Get enough rest -- which means sleep. It is impossible to repair a shattered spirit when you are exhausted. If natural sleep refuses to come, ask your doctor for medication to get you through this crisis.

(2) Eat. Grief-stricken people often become weak and ill because they have no appetite. Start with small amounts of nourishing food, then on to three meals a day.

(3) Go back to work at once. Sitting around and mourning never solved a problem. Keeping active and involved can be good medicine for a broken heart. It's all there in the Bible, dear. Seek and ye shall find.

Dear Ann Landers: I know from reading your column that you don't believe in lonely-hearts clubs, computer dating or third-party matching of mates. You even put thumbs down on a scientific foundation run by a doctor and a minister.

Since you get so many letters from lonely people, Ann, why don't you consider interviewing them in your home -- the most promising ones, that is. You could then see for yourself what they are like.

What a wonderful service you could perform, dear Ann! Please reconsider. It could change your life. -- A Caring Person

Dear Person: It could change my life all right. Thanks a heap. All I need is hundreds of lovelorn in my living room, waiting to be "paired up."

If you don't mind I think I'll just do the best I can with this column. As it is I'm putting in a 10-to-12-hour day.

Are your parents troo strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers's booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Fredom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

God suggested three things: (1) Get enough rest -- which means sleep. It is impossible to repair a shattered spirit when you are exhausted. If natural sleep refuses to come, ask your doctor for medication to get you through this crisis.

(2) Eat. Grief-stricken people often become weak and ill because they have no appetite. Start with small amounts of nourishing food, then on to three meals a day.

(3) Go back to work at once. Sitting around and mourning never solved a problem. Keeping active and involved can be good medicine for a broken heart. It's all there in the Bible, dear. Seek and ye shall find.

Dear Ann Landers: I know from reading your column that you don't believe in lonely-hearts clubs, computer dating or third-party matching of mates. You even put thumbs down on a scientific foundation run by a doctor and a minister.

Since you get so many letters from lonely people, Ann, why don't you consider interviewing them in your home -- the most promising ones, that is. You could then see for yourself what they are like.

What a wonderful service you could perform, dear Ann! Please reconsider. It could change your life. -- A Caring Person

Dear Person: It could change my life all right. Thanks a heap. All I need is hundreds of lovelorn in my living room, waiting to be "paired up."

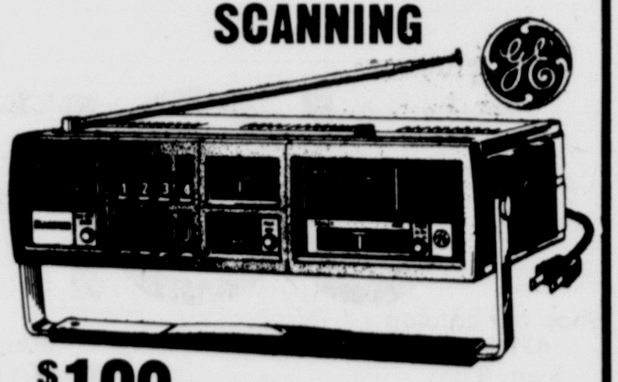

If you don't mind I think I'll just do the best I can with this column. As it is I'm putting in a 10-to-12-hour day.

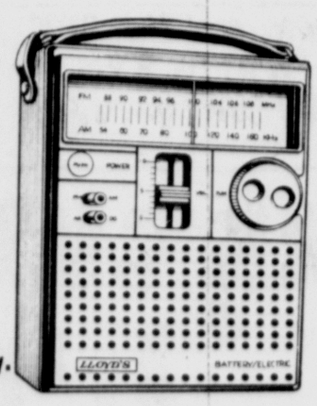

Are your parents troo strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers's booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Fredom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Try A New Snack

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Cooks often ask us to suggest a new snack to serve at a cocktail party or informal get-together. So here's a recipe for Salty Dollars that we've just come upon. Offered with brisling sardines and cheese, they make interesting refreshment. Chances are your guests will have fun guessing what's in them!

SALTY DOLLARS

8-ounce can sauerkraut
11-ounce package pie crust mix
1 tablespoon caraway seeds
¼ to ½ teaspoon pepper
1 egg yolk slightly beaten with 2 teaspoons water

Turn the sauerkraut into a strainer to drain; press down with a spoon to force out remaining liquid. Sprinkle between sheets of paper toweling and dry. Chop fine. Stir sauerkraut, caraway seeds and pepper into pie crust mix; with a fork stir in the amount of cold water (¼ cup) the mix calls for so that dough holds together; form into a ball. Cover and chill. Cut in half. Roll out, one-half at a time, on a prepared pastry cloth with a prepared stockinet-covered rolling pin to no more than ⅛-inch thickness. With a 2½-inch round cookie cutter, cut out. Place slightly apart on a lightly greased cookie sheet; brush with egg wash. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until lightly browned — about 12 minutes. Serve warm or cold. Makes about 3½ dozen.

Life Insurance Field Is Drawing More Women

CHICAGO (AP) — More and more women are entering the field of life insurance selling, and they have an advantage in dealing with members of their own sex, says a financial expert at Esmark, Inc., a diversified holding company with major interests in financial services.

Of the almost 78 million adult women in the United States today "there are an almost equal number of lifestyles," he says. "Each of these women is an individual with goals — and meaningful values — of her own."

Women who enter the financial services field bring with them an understanding of the needs of other women, which can be a big plus, the spokesman points out, but adds that certain guidelines can help the women become a success in the heretofore predominantly masculine areas of insurance and investment.

These dos and don'ts for women dealing with clients are offered by Globe Life Insurance Co., an Esmark subsidiary:

—Emphasize the freedom of choice. Let your client tell you what she wants. Don't tell her.

—Approach her in an intelligent, businesslike way — and she'll be likely to respond in a similar manner.

Joy of Stitching

by ELSA WILLIAMS

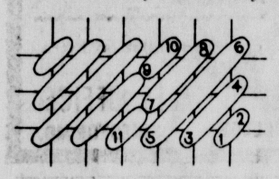

MAKING IT YOURS

Being introduced to a new stitch is a little like being taught a few words in a new language. You acknowledge the introduction with pleasure, study the acquisition until you've made it yours and then try to find ways to use it in conversation.

I find myself wanting to remind embroidery students of this when they learn a new stitch and are hesitant about using it. This is especially true of canvas work stitches. There are many needlewomen who never use anything but the Tent and Basketweave stitch even though they've taken pains to learn others.

It's like being given a ticket to an interesting place and never leaving home.

The only way to make a new stitch yours is to use it. Even if you're dissatisfied and decide to rip it out, you've learned something. You've taken the first step toward adding it to your embroidery vocabulary.

Perhaps you've just learned the Scottish stitch — that invaluable little square of five diagonal stitches in varying sizes. Used as background in a solid color it's more varied than Basketweave.

Don't be content to stop there. Experiment: try it in several shades of a color with the squares forming stripes that run vertically, horizontally or diagonally. Vary the size of the squares from a tiny one of three stitches to a larger one of seven.

Since four of the small squares of three stitches will cover the same number of canvas threads as one Scottish square of five stitches, it probably will occur to you that you can mix them. Which is exactly what I did in one of the designs in "Creative Canvas Work," where I created a three-color combination of diagonally striped Scottish stitch with Diagonal Mosaic (the cluster of four tiny squares).

For a FREE illustrated leaflet showing the basic embroidery stitches, write to Elsa Williams, Box 3788, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017

It's a fine idea to learn new stitches in a class or from a book but they're not really yours until your needle has become completely familiar with them, until you've experimented and made them tools for your own creative expression.

***

Dear Elsa,

I just finished a flower pattern in needlepoint and am very disappointed in how little the colors of the blossoms stand out against the background. Since I chose the colors myself, I realize it's my own fault. But I hate the idea of ripping them out. It's a stylized design. Is there anything I can do short of ripping?

J.J.H.

Dear J.J.H.,

As you do more embroidery you'll distinguish more readily the designs in which a subtle change of tone is perfect and those in which a sharper contrast is needed. There is one thing you might try in your present predicament. For example, if you used rose color for flowers against a pink background, you might outline the flowers in a third shade, deeper than either of the first two. Use the same Stem or Chain stitch you've used in crewel work even though neither is commonly used on canvas. The emphasis of these edges may "lift" your petals away from the background and give them the definition you're looking for.

Trash management better than burial

COLUMBIA — So much has been written about the complex subject of trash or solid waste disposal that three authorities at the University of Missouri-Columbia thought a summary was in order.

Accordingly, a brochure on the topic, "Trash Management: Better Than Burial", has been prepared to assist local governmental officials who must make decisions best for their community based upon the several technical approaches available.

The authors are John Duepner and John Ballard, extension local government specialists with experience in the Kansas City and lake regions of Missouri, and Richard R. Dohm, director of the governmental affairs program at UMC and an associate professor of political science.

"One result of the increased environmental concern of the late 1960's was a status elevation for trash," the authors contend. "With increased awareness came an almost unanimous commitment to the sanitary landfill as an answer.

"Sanitary landfills are a distinct improvement over open dumps, which led to air and water pollution as well as health hazards. There are many communities where the landfill approach may be the only practical strategy to implement immediately. But in the long run, a huge amount of materials are buried with no discernable return. It is inconceivable that the United States can continue to use such a technique for long when natural resources are diminishing and already in short supply in some cases."

The authors mentioned the "milling" alternative to landfills -- putting trash through a grinder to reduce to pieces of uniform size. This relatively simple process, they said, produces a material useable as fill with minimal compaction and without cover. It extends the life of a landfill and is more acceptable to the public esthetically.

"Until recently the size and expense of grinding machinery restricted the milling alternative to places of considerable population," they continued.

"With cost figures beginning about $200,000 and going well beyond $2 million, milling was beyond the reach of non-metropolitan areas. Manufacturers with an eye toward the larger market, however, realized a 20 to 60 tons per hour capacity was not required by every potential mill purchaser. Some now offer low capacity grinder- shredders priced below $4,000."

After dismissing standard incineration because of air pollution standards and the desire to recover resources, the authors launched into a discussion of "pyrolysis," a process for changing solid waste into storable, transportable fuel, either liquid or gas. Final cost estimates are unavailable, but should be comparable with that of incinerators, they said.

While pyrolysis has several plus factors, disadvantages include not accepting all types of waste, developmental work is still under way, and recovery materials will have to be marketed, the authors said.

More hope seems to hinge on recovery and recycling, with some of the experimental efforts saving dollars. Because of the potential of presorting materials, the approach is suitable for small and large municipalities.

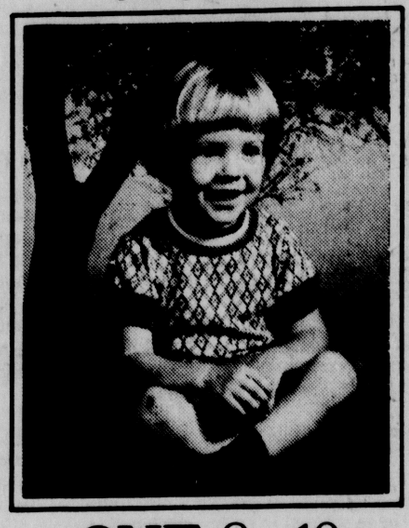

The authors cited Crestwood in the St. Louis metropolitan area where a recycling center was opened primarily as a conservation effort. It received $19,453 for its recoverables for the first 10 months of 1974.

Jr. college funds released

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond said today he is releasing more than $550,000 in state funds for junior colleges which had previously been withheld from this year's appropriations.

"I'm glad that improved state revenues have allowed me to approve this badly needed payment to junior colleges," the governor said in a statement.

Trash management better than burial

COLUMBIA — So much has been written about the complex subject of trash or solid waste disposal that three authorities at the University of Missouri-Columbia thought a summary was in order.

Accordingly, a brochure on the topic, "Trash Management: Better Than Burial", has been prepared to assist local governmental officials who must make decisions best for their community based upon the several technical approaches available.

The authors are John Duepner and John Ballard, extension local government specialists with experience in the Kansas City and lake regions of Missouri, and Richard R. Dohm, director of the governmental affairs program at UMC and an associate professor of political science.

"One result of the increased environmental concern of the late 1960's was a status elevation for trash," the authors contend. "With increased awareness came an almost unanimous commitment to the sanitary landfill as an answer.

"Sanitary landfills are a distinct improvement over open dumps, which led to air and water pollution as well as health hazards. There are many communities where the landfill approach may be the only practical strategy to implement immediately. But in the long run, a huge amount of materials are buried with no discernable return. It is inconceivable that the United States can continue to use such a technique for long when natural resources are diminishing and already in short supply in some cases."

The authors mentioned the "milling" alternative to landfills -- putting trash through a grinder to reduce to pieces of uniform size. This relatively simple process, they said, produces a material useable as fill with minimal compaction and without cover. It extends the life of a landfill and is more acceptable to the public esthetically.

"Until recently the size and expense of grinding machinery restricted the milling alternative to places of considerable population," they continued.

"With cost figures beginning about $200,000 and going well beyond $2 million, milling was beyond the reach of non-metropolitan areas. Manufacturers with an eye toward the larger market, however, realized a 20 to 60 tons per hour capacity was not required by every potential mill purchaser. Some now offer low capacity grinder- shredders priced below $4,000."

After dismissing standard incineration because of air pollution standards and the desire to recover resources, the authors launched into a discussion of "pyrolysis," a process for changing solid waste into storable, transportable fuel, either liquid or gas. Final cost estimates are unavailable, but should be comparable with that of incinerators, they said.

While pyrolysis has several plus factors, disadvantages include not accepting all types of waste, developmental work is still under way, and recovery materials will have to be marketed, the authors said.

More hope seems to hinge on recovery and recycling, with some of the experimental efforts saving dollars. Because of the potential of presorting materials, the approach is suitable for small and large municipalities.

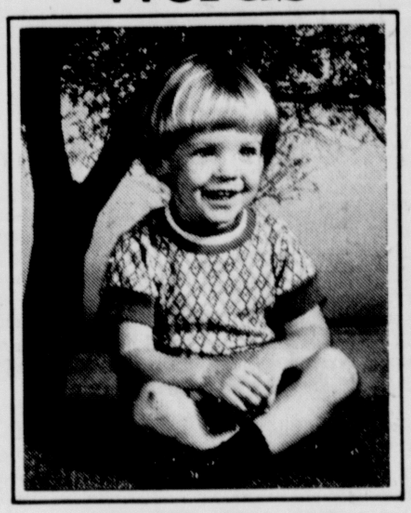

The authors cited Crestwood in the St. Louis metropolitan area where a recycling center was opened primarily as a conservation effort. It received $19,453 for its recoverables for the first 10 months of 1974.

Trash management better than burial

COLUMBIA — So much has been written about the complex subject of trash or solid waste disposal that three authorities at the University of Missouri-Columbia thought a summary was in order.

Accordingly, a brochure on the topic, "Trash Management: Better Than Burial", has been prepared to assist local governmental officials who must make decisions best for their community based upon the several technical approaches available.

The authors are John Duepner and John Ballard, extension local government specialists with experience in the Kansas City and lake regions of Missouri, and Richard R. Dohm, director of the governmental affairs program at UMC and an associate professor of political science.

"One result of the increased environmental concern of the late 1960's was a status elevation for trash," the authors contend. "With increased awareness came an almost unanimous commitment to the sanitary landfill as an answer.

"Sanitary landfills are a distinct improvement over open dumps, which led to air and water pollution as well as health hazards. There are many communities where the landfill approach may be the only practical strategy to implement immediately. But in the long run, a huge amount of materials are buried with no discernable return. It is inconceivable that the United States can continue to use such a technique for long when natural resources are diminishing and already in short supply in some cases."

The authors mentioned the "milling" alternative to landfills -- putting trash through a grinder to reduce to pieces of uniform size. This relatively simple process, they said, produces a material useable as fill with minimal compaction and without cover. It extends the life of a landfill and is more acceptable to the public esthetically.

"Until recently the size and expense of grinding machinery restricted the milling alternative to places of considerable population," they continued.

"With cost figures beginning about $200,000 and going well beyond $2 million, milling was beyond the reach of non-metropolitan areas. Manufacturers with an eye toward the larger market, however, realized a 20 to 60 tons per hour capacity was not required by every potential mill purchaser. Some now offer low capacity grinder- shredders priced below $4,000."

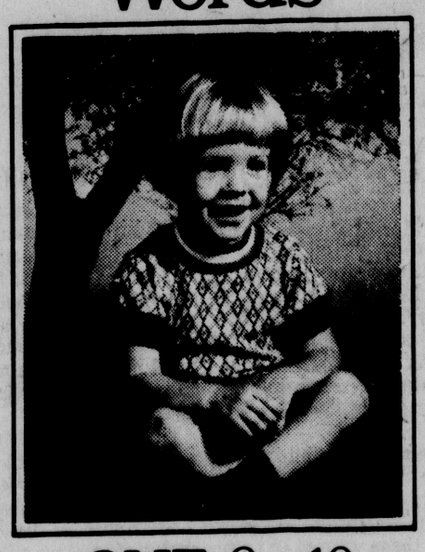

After dismissing standard incineration because of air pollution standards and the desire to recover resources, the authors launched into a discussion of "pyrolysis," a process for changing solid waste into storable, transportable fuel, either liquid or gas. Final cost estimates are unavailable, but should be comparable with that of incinerators, they said.

While pyrolysis has several plus factors, disadvantages include not accepting all types of waste, developmental work is still under way, and recovery materials will have to be marketed, the authors said.

More hope seems to hinge on recovery and recycling, with some of the experimental efforts saving dollars. Because of the potential of presorting materials, the approach is suitable for small and large municipalities.

The authors cited Crestwood in the St. Louis metropolitan area where a recycling center was opened primarily as a conservation effort. It received $19,453 for its recoverables for the first 10 months of 1974.

Jr. college funds released

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond said today he is releasing more than $550,000 in state funds for junior colleges which had previously been withheld from this year's appropriations.

"I'm glad that improved state revenues have allowed me to approve this badly needed payment to junior colleges," the governor said in a statement.

Phils continue road streak

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Don't ask Danny Ozark why his Philadelphia Phillies can't lose on the road. He's in the dark too.

Ozark watched his National League club nab its 13th straight victory away from home by decisioning the St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 Wednesday night and afterward could only chuckle.

"They were asking me the same thing last year; 'how come you're so bad on the road?'" the Phils manager mused while recalling the team's early 5-18 record for futility in 1975.

"The answer is I don't know," Ozark responded when asked to explain the dramatic turnaround.

"I only know that we're playing good baseball," he suggested. "The games we win now we don't have to worry about later. It may not continue, but we're going to take all we can while we can."

Philadelphia's triumph inched the Phils, who own a 14-1 road record over-all, close to the major league mark of 17 straight victories away from home set by the 1916 New York Giants.

But in the process the club which owns a a 6½-game lead in the NL East Division may have also come up with a problem.

Tom Underwood, a young left-hander who has compiled a 4-0 record against St. Louis, did his customary act of spellbinding with a nifty five-hitter.

"We have six starting pitchers and can use only five regularly," said Rippelmeyer, who 24 hours earlier watched tall Phils right-hander Ron Reed spin a 6-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"We've had to explain that everybody's going to get a chance but that the big thing is we're going to win," Rippelmeyer noted.

Underwood, 2-1, tamed the Cards with superior control and an assortment of pitches that included a key, two-out slider to Reggie Smith in the eighth inning.

Then, with the bases full and only right-hander Gene Garber warming in the bullpen, the Phils southpaw escaped his most serious jam by inducing the switch-hitting Smith to pop up.

"Mike Schmidt came over and asked me if I was tired," said Underwood. "I was, but in that situation we'd rather had Smith batting right-handed against me than left-handed against Garber."

All the Phils offense needed by the 5-foot-11 pitcher was a two-run single off his bat in the fifth that offset Hector Cruz' solo home run for St. Louis.

"I was looking for the curve ball and I hit a fast ball on the inside of the plate," said the surprised Underwood, a lifetime .119 hitter whose blow came off John Curtis, 3-5.

Sobers sparks Suns to 109-107 win over Celtics

PHOENIX (AP) — Ricky Sobers, Phoenix' "other" rookie, played like number one in Game Four of the National Basketball Association championship series.

And because of his performance, the underdog Suns, the longest shot in the 10-team field that began the NBA playoffs this season, beat the Boston Celtics 109-107 Wednesday night and tied the best-of-seven series 2-2.

Surprisingly, Sobers credited Boston's John Havlicek with helping him perform well ... not because of anything the Celtics' captain did in the game, but becasue of something he remembered the 36-year-old star saying on television.

The incident occurred during a telecast of a Boston game that Sobers was watching while he was at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

"I remember Havlicek saying that defense is the key to the game of basketball," said the 23-year-old Sobers, a defensive specialist. "He said the best way to get into the NBA was to know how to play defense, and ever since then I've been stressing defense."

Sobers took charge in the third period of Game Four. With Boston leading 71-70 midway through the quarter, the Suns reeled off 12 consecutive points, eight of them by the embattled rookie. Sobers also fed Keith Erickson for another basket during this spree.

The streak put the Suns ahead 82-71 — and they never trailed after that.

However, they did experience some scares. Eight times in the last period, Boston drew within two points — but each time, the inexperienced Suns, the team expected to crack under the intense pressure of a championship series, repulsed the threats.

"Pressure is a thing you put only upon yourself and you have to be oblivious to it," said the fiery Sobers, who has been involved in one fight in each of Phoenix' three playoff series this year. "I love pressure."

Sobers finished with 14 points, while Paul Westphal led the Suns with 28, Alvan Adams — the NBA's Rookie of the Year — scored 20 and Garfield Heard had 19 points and 15 rebounds. Jo Jo White paced the Celtics with 25 points, Dave Cowens had 22 points and 12 rebounds and Paul Silas collected 18 points and four rebounds.

Game Five will be Friday night in Boston and the sixth game will be in Phoenix Sunday. A seventh game, if necessary, will be at Boston next Wednesday.

Chiefs get draft choice in exchange for Taylor

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Otis Taylor, 11-year veteran of the Kansas City Chiefs, was traded Wednesday to the Houston Oilers for a future undisclosed draft choice.

It was a move that surprised no one. The 33-year-old all-time big-play pass receiver for the team had been unable to show his style to a new coaching staff last year, as he was sidelined for all but one game, hampered with fluid on the knee. Taylor saw action only in the opener in Denver.

Chiefs head coach Paul Wiggin admitted it was a decision he would rather not have had to make.

"Otis has been a super star in the National Football League and has carried a great impact on the Chiefs in their championship years." Wiggin said. "We are happy that we were able to place him with a contending team."

Another factor which precipitated the trade is an effort by the Chiefs to rebuild with young players who will be in summer training camp.

"We have some fine young receivers in Barry Pearson, Larry Brunson, Reggie Craig, free agent Ike McBee and draft picks Henry Marshall and Harold Porter," Wiggin said. "These are all young players who have some promising careers ahead of them and we decided to go in this direction because of the talent available to us."

Taylor made an outstanding contribution to the team in 1965, his first year, after being obtained as a No. 4 draft choice in the American Football League draft, while he was being held for the Philadelphia Eagles. His college play was with Prairie View A&M.

That first pro season he hit his career high of 1,297 yards on 58 catches. With his help, the Chiefs moved on to the Super Bowl, but even Taylor's 31-yard catch of a touchdown pass couldn't forestall the Green Bay victory, 35-10.

Super Bowl IV gave Taylor another chance to do what he became best known for, taking a short pass from Len Dawson and turning it into a 46-yard score, helping make Kansas City victorious over Minnesota 23-7.

Perhaps his most outstanding pass reception occurred in 1971 during a Wshington game, when he caught a Dawson pass in the end zone with his left arm pinned by a Redskin defender. Taylor, in the pass-receiving style which made him famous, stuck up his right arm for the pass.

Phils continue road streak

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Don't ask Danny Ozark why his Philadelphia Phillies can't lose on the road. He's in the dark too.

Ozark watched his National League club nab its 13th straight victory away from home by decisioning the St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 Wednesday night and afterward could only chuckle.

"They were asking me the same thing last year; 'how come you're so bad on the road?'" the Phils manager mused while recalling the team's early 5-18 record for futility in 1975.

"The answer is I don't know," Ozark responded when asked to explain the dramatic turnaround.

"I only know that we're playing good baseball," he suggested. "The games we win now we don't have to worry about later. It may not continue, but we're going to take all we can while we can."

Philadelphia's triumph inched the Phils, who own a 14-1 road record over-all, close to the major league mark of 17 straight victories away from home set by the 1916 New York Giants.

But in the process the club which owns a a 6½-game lead in the NL East Division may have also come up with a problem.

Tom Underwood, a young left-hander who has compiled a 4-0 record against St. Louis, did his customary act of spellbinding with a nifty five-hitter.

"We have six starting pitchers and can use only five regularly," said Rippelmeyer, who 24 hours earlier watched tall Phils right-hander Ron Reed spin a 6-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"We've had to explain that everybody's going to get a chance but that the big thing is we're going to win," Rippelmeyer noted.

Underwood, 2-1, tamed the Cards with superior control and an assortment of pitches that included a key, two-out slider to Reggie Smith in the eighth inning.

Then, with the bases full and only right-hander Gene Garber warming in the bullpen, the Phils southpaw escaped his most serious jam by inducing the switch-hitting Smith to pop up.

"Mike Schmidt came over and asked me if I was tired," said Underwood. "I was, but in that situation we'd rather had Smith batting right-handed against me than left-handed against Garber."

All the Phils offense needed by the 5-foot-11 pitcher was a two-run single off his bat in the fifth that offset Hector Cruz' solo home run for St. Louis.

"I was looking for the curve ball and I hit a fast ball on the inside of the plate," said the surprised Underwood, a lifetime .119 hitter whose blow came off John Curtis, 3-5.

Paul Dean and wife still active in baseball

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Forty one years ago a young journalism student in Arkansas was assigned to interview Paul Dean, a young up-and-coming baseball player.

It halted her budding career as a reporter, but she married the subject of the interview. Today Dorothy and Paul are happily married and still active in baseball.

Paul, remembered by the nickname "Daffy," and his older brother, the late Dizzy Dean, were a colorful and highly successful pitching combination for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Dizzy had joined the Cardinals in 1932, Paul joining him two years later. In his rookie year, Paul pitched a no-hitter and won 19 games, two in the World Series.

Currently Dorothy and Paul are in Tulsa where he is conducting a clinic for the American Association Tulsa Oilers. They return on weekends to an apartment they have at Springdale, Ark. They also have a farm at Lake Village, Ark., and a home in Dallas where they have lived off-and-on for 35 years.

"I love baseball and always have," Mrs. Dean said at their apartment.

"When you are married to a major league baseball star there is no greater life. Diz and Paul were stars."

After Paul joined the Cardinals, she traveled with the team until their first child was born. After that she limited her following to home games.

"All the travel was by train then," she recalled. "I would pack a trunk, stay in a hotel three or four days, then repack the trunk, put it back on the train and go on."

Baseball had more fan interest in that era, she believes.

"There were better players and more colorful players. There was more interest in them, with many more minor league teams across the countrv."

Alice Talley of Cape Girardeau displays the eight-pound Albino catfish she landed while fishing in a lake near Sikeston recently. Mrs. Talley had a total catch of 70 pounds. According to the number of albino catfish stocked in the lake, the chances for landing one of them is one in 5,000.

NCAA track championships open today at Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two world record holders, pole vaulter Earl Bell and high jumper Dwight Stones, could steal the show from defending champion Texas-El Paso and individual defenders in the three-day NCAA Track and Field championships opening today.

Bell, of Arkansas State, is fresh from vaulting 18 feet, 7¼ inches a week ago to unofficially erase the 18-6½ record held by Dave Roberts of the Florida Track Club. Bell, the defending NCAA pole vault champ, set his record on a first-try jump.

The qualifying is set for today at Penn's Franklin Field.

The cocky Stones, of Long Beach, according to Track and Field News the only unanimous choice for an Olympic gold medal at this summer's Olympics, holds the world mark of 7-6⅝. He's an Olympic bronze medalist, who has set eight world records. He's been over 7-5 in 18 different meets.

Just to get a shot at Stones in the NCAAs, a competitor has to have cleared seven feet, and there are 99 coaches who believe their jumpers can do it.

In addition to Bell, defending champions are John Negno of Washington State in the 5,000 and 10,000 meters; James Munyala, UTEP, in the 3,000; Eamonn Coghlan of Villanova in the 1,500; Reggie Jones, Tennessee, in the 200; Louisiana State's Larry Shipp, 110-meter hurdles, and Jim McGoldrick of Texas in the discus. Southern California defends the 400 meter relay title.

UTEP figures to be challenged for the team title by Southern California, Tennessee, Kansas, UCLA and Arizona State. Tennessee won two years ago, and UCLA has finished first three times and second twice in the past five years.

The Miners of UTEP, including 16 foreign stars from such places as Kenya, Ghana, New Zealand, Sweden and Norway, have almost the same team that won last year at Provo, Utah. The foreign contingent, referred to as UTEP's "Foreign Legion," amassed 80 of the team's points last year.

Southern California, which won the Pacific 8 title with a record 180 points, appears to have the best across the board balance of the 154 schools entered in the meet. The Trojans feature Ken Randle in the 400 meters, and James Gilkes in the 200; Russ Rogers, an 18-foot pole vaulter, Tom Andrews, a 400-meter hurdler, and a speedy 400-meter relayteam.

Kansas, winner of the Big Eight title with 189 points, is keyed by sprinters such as Larry Jackson in the 100 and 200, Laverne Smith in the 400, and Cliff Wiley in the 200 and 400. The Jayhawks also have a contending 400-meter relay team.

The meet, hopefully a showing of U.S. strength for the Summer Olympics at Montreal, opened today at 1 p.m. with some field event qualifying trials. The first track event was scheduled for 3:30 p.m. All Thursday events are trials for Friday semifinals or finals.

Friday, there will be finals in the hammer, long jump, shot put, 110 hurdles, the 100 and 10,000 meters.

Bulldog-Glendale game at 1:30 Fri.

A 1:30 p.m. starting time has been set for tomorrow's Class AA state tournament semifinal game between the Sikeston Bulldogs and Springfield Glendale.

The game, postponed for four consecutive days last weekend, will be played at Ste. Genevieve. Another semifinal matchup, pitting Jennings against Kennedy, will follow the Sikeston-Glendale game. The winners will then return to the field Saturday afternoon for the championship game at 1:30.

Senior southpaw Ricky Taylor is again expected to be the Bulldog starting pitcher, while hard- throwing Brad Simmons will probably take the mound for Glendale.

Bell's goal: make the Olympic team

JONESBORO, Ark. — What can Earl Bell do for an encore? He's done about everything possible in pole vaulting except win a gold medal. And come to think of it, he's even done that (the Pan American Games gold medal last October at Mexico City).

But what's next? Does setting a new world record mean that Bell is a shoo-in for the Olympic gold medal at Montreal?

"Not on your life," says the Arkansas State University junior who ranks on top of the world after his vault of 18-7¼ last weekend at Wichita, Kan. "My goal now is to develop some consistency and just make the American team. And the way the system is, that may be harder than winning a medal.

"It all boils down to what you do in one particular meet -- on one particular day. There are so many factors involved, too, like weather, wind, the runway, how you feel, the competition, your speed, the bend in the pole, the pit, the time of the day -- so many little things that unless you're a vaulter, it's hard to imagine.

"It'll be interesting, though. I can promise you that," he continued. "There are so many quality vaulters in this country."

Bell, who is in Philadelphia this week defending his NCAA Outdoor Championship, says he would like to clear in the mid-18's with regularity before even thinking about bettering his world record.

"Consistency and confidence are the name of the game in any kind of athletic competition," he said. "If you can't accomplish something consistently, you begin to think the first and only time you did it was a fluke. But once you have confidence at a certain height, then you can begin thinking about a new one."

Guy Kochel, Bell's coach at ASU, said that he wouldn't rule out Earl's upping his world standard sometime this summer.

Rory Henry of Vancouver, B.C. made a hit in his 225 hydro at Seattle's Green Lake Sunday, but it wasn't the kind of hit he had in mind. Henry's boat flipped during the Memorial Day Regatta, but he was not seriously hurt. Gordy Gillmer of Tacoma set a new world speed record during the race, averaging 100.550 miles per hour.

Littell gets 3rd victory as Royals edge A's

OAKLAND (AP) — Manager Chuck Tanner of the Oakland Athletics called it one of the toughest losses of the season.

He was talking about a 4-3 defeat at the hands of the Kansas City Royals Wednesday night.

"You have to give them credit. They deserved to win," Tanner said.

The Royals tied the game on an unusual play in the ninth inning, then won on a sacrifice fly by John Mayberry in the 12th.

With a runner on second base and one out in the ninth, pinchbatter Tony Solatia hit a long fly to center field. Fred Patek, on second base at the time, took off for third as soon as the ball was caught and just kept running.

He beat the relay from Bill North to Bert Campaneris to catcher Tim Hosley.

"I was thinking about going all the way as soon as I saw how far the ball was hit," Patek said. "I don't remember ever scoring from second base on a sacrifice fly before."

Tanner was not surprised that Patek attempted to score. "It would have taken a perfect play to get him," Tanner said.

Rollie Fingers was charged with his fifth defeat of the season although he pitched quite well over the final five innings. Amos Otis walked to lead off the 12th inning and went to third on a single by George Brett, his fourth hit of the game.

Mayberry then lofted a fly deep enough to allow Otis to score.

Mark Littell held the A's scoreless for four innings to pick up his third victory of the season. He needed relief help from Steve Mingori to get the final out of the game.

The A's scored a run in the first inning when Kansas City starter Steve Busby walked Gene Tenace with the bases loaded.

Sal Bando's ninth homer of the season gave Oakland a 3-2 lead in the seventh inning, but Patek's hustle tied the score and sent the game into extra innings.

Bold Forbes is Belmont favorite

NEW YORK (AP) — Bold Forbes, fast and lucky, is set to close out the tough Triple Crown series as the favorite to win the Belmont Stakes Saturday.

"In this kind of racing you have to have luck to keep your horses sound," said trainer Laz Barerra, who saddled Bold Forbes for the Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

The only other Belmont probable who is a veteran of the first two Triple Crown races was Play The Red, a disappointing eighth in the Derby but a solid second in the Preakness.

Others expected to be entered today for the 1½-mile classic at Belmont Park were Howard P. Wilson's Great Contractor, Ogden Mills Phipps' Majestic Light, Mrs. Douglas Carver's McKenzie Bridge and Christiana Stable's Best Laid Plans.

Among the missing will be Honest Pleasure, the beaten favorite in the 1¼-mile Derby and the 13-16-mile Preakness, and Elocutionist, third in the Derby and the winner of the Preakness. Honest Pleasure is being rested while Elocutionist, who was pointed for the Belmont, suffered a wrenched ankle.

Johnny Campo, who trains Play The Red for Max Gluck, felt that Elocutionist, not Bold Forbes, would have been the horse to beat and that the Preakness winner's injury boosts his colt's chances of making the $150,000-added Belmont the first stakes win of a 15-race career.

Bold Forbes, a small colt at 15.2 hands, has survived the rigors of the Triple Crown well, said Barrera, who admitted he is worn out by the experience.

"I've been mentally very tired," the Cuban-born trainer said Wednesday. "It's good to have this kind of pressure because it means you have a good horse. But it's bad for your health."

"I think I'll give him probably about 45 days, then bring him back in Saratoga for the Travers," said Barrera.

The field for the 108th Belmont, scale weighted at 126 pounds, will go the post at 5:38 p.m. EDT. Television coverage by CBS will be from the 5-6 p.m.

ASU cage camp dates are set

JONESBORO, Ark. — Four weeks of instruction have been scheduled for the 10th Annual Arkansas State University Basketball Camp for Boys, according to ASU Assistant Coach and Camp Director Gary Holland.

Dates for the four weeks are June 27-July 2, July 11-16, July 18-23, and July 25-30. All boys entering the 7th through the 12th grades this fall are eligible to participate.

The Camp, one of the most successful in the South since its origin in 1967, features five forms of instruction and learning activities -- films, video tape, lectures, individual instruction and actual game competition daily.

Individual instruction consists of work on all fundamentals of the game-- shooting, ball-handling, scoring situations, defense, rebounding, etc. Lectures and films are centered around "The Attitude of an Athlete", "Off-season Training Program", "Improving Your Shooting Skills", etc.

Tuition for the five-day camp is $90 (or $160 for two weeks) which includes room and board and insurance. A non-refundable despoit of $30 is required to reserve a spot during one of the weeks (or $50 for two weeks), and the spots are filled on a first-come, first-serve basis. The balance of the tuition is then paid during camp registration.

Additional information regarding the camps may be obtained by telephoning (501) 972-2077 or writing P.O. Box MMM, State University, Ar. 72467.

Chaffee BR holds workout

CHAFFEE— The Chaffee Senior Babe Ruth League will hold a registration and workout on Thursday, June 3 at 4:00 p.m. at Harmon Field. There will be another workout at 2:00 p.m. Sunday, June 6, at Harmon Field also.

Registration cost will be $6 which will cover insurance and caps.

The schedule will begin Monday, June 7 at Harmon Field.

Anyone interested in playing who cannot make the workout schedule will have to contact coach Mike Payne or Gene Stubbs or Bob Wachter before June 6.

Bell's goal: make the Olympic team

JONESBORO, Ark. — What can Earl Bell do for an encore? He's done about everything possible in pole vaulting except win a gold medal. And come to think of it, he's even done that (the Pan American Games gold medal last October at Mexico City).

But what's next? Does setting a new world record mean that Bell is a shoo-in for the Olympic gold medal at Montreal?

"Not on your life," says the Arkansas State University junior who ranks on top of the world after his vault of 18-7¼ last weekend at Wichita, Kan. "My goal now is to develop some consistency and just make the American team. And the way the system is, that may be harder than winning a medal.

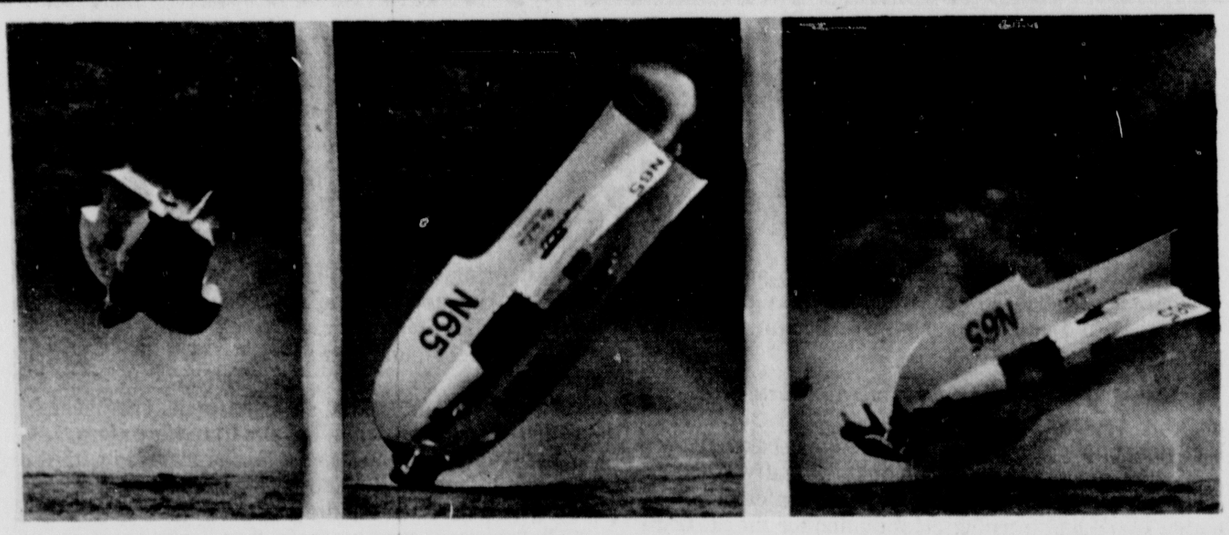

"It all boils down to what you do in one particular meet -- on one particular day. There are so many factors involved, too, like weather, wind, the runway, how you feel, the competition, your speed, the bend in the pole, the pit, the time of the day -- so many little things that unless you're a vaulter, it's hard to imagine.

"It'll be interesting, though. I can promise you that," he continued. "There are so many quality vaulters in this country."

Bell, who is in Philadelphia this week defending his NCAA Outdoor Championship, says he would like to clear in the mid-18's with regularity before even thinking about bettering his world record.

"Consistency and confidence are the name of the game in any kind of athletic competition," he said. "If you can't accomplish something consistently, you begin to think the first and only time you did it was a fluke. But once you have confidence at a certain height, then you can begin thinking about a new one."

Guy Kochel, Bell's coach at ASU, said that he wouldn't rule out Earl's upping his world standard sometime this summer.

Rory Henry of Vancouver, B.C. made a hit in his 225 hydro at Seattle's Green Lake Sunday, but it wasn't the kind of hit he had in mind. Horse awakens woman in Chaffee house blaze

CHAFFEE — A Chaffee woman whose home was destroyed by fire here early Monday morning owes her life to a warning sounded by a horse.

Mrs. Dessie Pepple, 315 N. Fifth St., was awakened about 2 a.m. by a horse quartered in an outbuilding which was kicking against the side of doors of the shed.

It was then she noted her house was filled with smoke. With the fire spreading, she had to go some distance to summon firemen because telephone lines were down. Firemen were unable to stop the blaze or save any of the home's contents.

The fire apparently started in the electric wiring located in the attic. Whether the storm late Sunday night contributed to the blaze is uncertain, although winds blew part of a tree against the lead-in wires which may have caused a short.

That storm also was responsible for the stabling of a horse in the building near Mrs. Pepple's house. Her granddaughter, Miss Linda Pepple, put it there about midnight.

Miss Pepple has five horses stabled in her grandmother's barn. After the Sunday night storm she went to check on the animals and found that part of the barn roof had been blown away.

She then placed one of the horses in the outbuilding. when she returned after the fire she found the building and barn both filled with smoke, terrorizing the animals. They were safely removed.

Many things to do at D.C. Bicentennial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Talk of a world's fair-type exhibition for the Bicentennial was abandoned years ago, but the nation's capital has come up with a close substitute.

There are few commercial exhibits, but so many free things to do and see that even a resident cannot hope to take them all in.

The Smithsonian Institution has been planning for the Bicentennial for years and the National Park Service almost as long. There are exhibits to appeal to almost any taste, free concerts, puppet shows, and many other events.

One thing that is extremely scarce is a parking space. Visitors from out of the city are advised to use the thousands of free spaces available at RFK Stadium, the North Pentagon parking lot and Ft. Myer South Post, adjacent to Arlington Cemetery.

There are signs on all major access highways directing motorists to these locations; shuttle buses leave for the city every two to five minutes.

A handy guide to what is happening on the national Mall is a brochure called "Summer at the Smithsonian," a reprint from Smithsonian magazine. Subscribers can pull out the 12-page section; others can buy it for 25 cents at museum shops, at the Festival of American Folklife and other locations.

It includes tips on where to park cars and bicycles, on shuttle bus service, food and picnic facilities and foreign language services.

The Folklife Festival, opening June 16 and running until Sept. 6, offers something for almost everyone. More than 5,000 musicians are participating along with craftsmen from every corner of the United States and 36 other countries.

There is an African diaspora section portraying the cultural experience of black Americans and their links to Africa, the Caribbean and Latin America.

American Indians will demonstrate stickball, lacrosse, canoe racing, buffalo barbeques, salmon bakes and other skills. A regional America area will feature a timber carnival, ranching, cowboy skills, maritime life and a glimpse at a coal miner's life.

Court asked to stop Ford food stamp regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal court is being asked to stop the Ford administration from initiating new regulations that would eventually remove more than 1.6 million families from the food stamp program.

U.S. District Court Judge Howard F. Corcoran was to hear arguments today from groups seeking a temporary injunction to stop the new regulations from going into effect next Tuesday.

If Corcoran does halt the new regulations, the courts will be asked to decide whether the new rules are constitutional.

The new rules would limit stamps to households with gross incomes that are no more than $100 above the nonfarm poverty level. For the typical food stamp family of three living in the continental United States, the new income ceiling would be $383 a month, plus $100. The present system has no gross income ceiling, but consists of a net income figure calculated by deducting some expenses.

The case was filed by 73 food stamp families, 26 state governments, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, 53 labor unions, 33 civic, political and civil rights organizations and 22 church groups.

Agriculture Department officials have predicted that the new rules would throw 1.66 million families off the food stamp program by the end of the year. In addition, another 1.72 million of the 5.88 million families currently receiving food stamps would have to pay more for the stamps under the administration's new rules.

The groups seeking the federal court action say the rules, ordered by President Ford on Feb. 19, are illegal, unconstitutional and unfair to low-income workers and those with unstable incomes.

But Ford, in a White House meeting Thursday with Atty. Gen. Edward Levi and Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, said he wanted government lawyers to defend his regulations forcefully.

Horse awakens woman in Chaffee house blaze

Mrs. Dessie Pepple, 315 N. Fifth St., was awakened about 2 a.m. by a horse quartered in an outbuilding which was kicking against the side of doors of the shed.

It was then she noted her house was filled with smoke. With the fire spreading, she had to go some distance to summon firemen because telephone lines were down. Firemen were unable to stop the blaze or save any of the home's contents.

The fire apparently started in the electric wiring located in the attic. Whether the storm late Sunday night contributed to the blaze is uncertain, although winds blew part of a tree against the lead-in wires which may have caused a short.

That storm also was responsible for the stabling of a horse in the building near Mrs. Pepple's house. Her granddaughter, Miss Linda Pepple, put it there about midnight.

Miss Pepple has five horses stabled in her grandmother's barn. After the Sunday night storm she went to check on the animals and found that part of the barn roof had been blown away.

She then placed one of the horses in the outbuilding. when she returned after the fire she found the building and barn both filled with smoke, terrorizing the animals. They were safely removed.

Many things to do at D.C. Bicentennial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Talk of a world's fair-type exhibition for the Bicentennial was abandoned years ago, but the nation's capital has come up with a close substitute.

There are few commercial exhibits, but so many free things to do and see that even a resident cannot hope to take them all in.

The Smithsonian Institution has been planning for the Bicentennial for years and the National Park Service almost as long. There are exhibits to appeal to almost any taste, free concerts, puppet shows, and many other events.

One thing that is extremely scarce is a parking space. Visitors from out of the city are advised to use the thousands of free spaces available at RFK Stadium, the North Pentagon parking lot and Ft. Myer South Post, adjacent to Arlington Cemetery.

There are signs on all major access highways directing motorists to these locations; shuttle buses leave for the city every two to five minutes.

A handy guide to what is happening on the national Mall is a brochure called "Summer at the Smithsonian," a reprint from Smithsonian magazine. Subscribers can pull out the 12-page section; others can buy it for 25 cents at museum shops, at the Festival of American Folklife and other locations.

It includes tips on where to park cars and bicycles, on shuttle bus service, food and picnic facilities and foreign language services.

The Folklife Festival, opening June 16 and running until Sept. 6, offers something for almost everyone. More than 5,000 musicians are participating along with craftsmen from every corner of the United States and 36 other countries.

There is an African diaspora section portraying the cultural experience of black Americans and their links to Africa, the Caribbean and Latin America.

American Indians will demonstrate stickball, lacrosse, canoe racing, buffalo barbeques, salmon bakes and other skills. A regional America area will feature a timber carnival, ranching, cowboy skills, maritime life and a glimpse at a coal miner's life.

Court asked to stop Ford food stamp regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal court is being asked to stop the Ford administration from initiating new regulations that would eventually remove more than 1.6 million families from the food stamp program.

U.S. District Court Judge Howard F. Corcoran was to hear arguments today from groups seeking a temporary injunction to stop the new regulations from going into effect next Tuesday.

If Corcoran does halt the new regulations, the courts will be asked to decide whether the new rules are constitutional.

The new rules would limit stamps to households with gross incomes that are no more than $100 above the nonfarm poverty level. For the typical food stamp family of three living in the continental United States, the new income ceiling would be $383 a month, plus $100. The present system has no gross income ceiling, but consists of a net income figure calculated by deducting some expenses.

The case was filed by 73 food stamp families, 26 state governments, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, 53 labor unions, 33 civic, political and civil rights organizations and 22 church groups.

Agriculture Department officials have predicted that the new rules would throw 1.66 million families off the food stamp program by the end of the year. In addition, another 1.72 million of the 5.88 million families currently receiving food stamps would have to pay more for the stamps under the administration's new rules.

The groups seeking the federal court action say the rules, ordered by President Ford on Feb. 19, are illegal, unconstitutional and unfair to low-income workers and those with unstable incomes.

But Ford, in a White House meeting Thursday with Atty. Gen. Edward Levi and Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, said he wanted government lawyers to defend his regulations forcefully.

Gangland attempt made on investigative reporter's life

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The condition of a newspaper reporter injured in what police said was a gangland-style attempt on his life was reported deteriorating early today.

Don Bolles, 47, an investigative reporter for the Arizona Republic, was injured critically Wednesday when a bomb exploded in his car, police said. Bolles' right leg was amputated above the knee during five hours of surgery.

Police said there was no doubt the explosion outside the Clarendon House Hotel in north-central Phoenix was a deliberate attempt to murder the reporter. Paramedics, who rushed to assist the injured man, said he told them he was "working on a Mafia story."

The Republic and the Phoenix Gazette offered a $25,000 reward for information about the incident, and the state put up another $1,000.

Atty. Gen. Bruce Babbitt said he interpreted the bombing as an act by someone trying "brazenly to intimidate the entire community."

Police Sgt. Robert Konkle said Bolles identified a person who might have planted the bomb. Konkle said authorities were looking for the man Bolles named.

Bolles began as a reporter for the Republic in 1962 after nine years with The Associated Press. He joined The AP in New York in 1953, transferring later that year to the Newark, N.J., bureau and in 1956 to the New Jersey capital bureau at Trenton. In 1961 and 1962, before going to the Republic, Bolles was AP correspondent at Lexington, Ky. Prior to 1953, he worked for the Bergen Evening Record in Hackensack, N.J.

He wrote a series of articles on Mafia infiltration of Arizona business in 1970, and won the Arizona Press Club's Newsman of the Year award in 1974 for a story on the conflict of interest in the legislature.

Academies graduate new military officers

Associated Press Writer

Ranks of new officers marched from graduation ceremonies at the nation's four major military academies, leaving underclassmen to deal with scandals involving traditional honor systems and to greet the first waves of female cadets.

But the disruptions and coming changes were mentioned only at West Point on Wednesday. Speakers at the Naval, Coast Guard and Air Force academies dwelt on foreign policy and national security and the need for strong military forces.

None mentioned the women who will be joining the classes of 1980 under new federal laws saying the armed forces have to train women on equal terms with men.

Only the Naval Academy at Annapolis is free this year of a cheating scandal. It has had no such problems since seven midshipmen were dismissed in 1974.

But six cadets resigned from the Air Force Academy last week after being convicted by a student honor committee of cheating.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A constitutional amendment which would permit the legislature to provide textbook and transportation assistance to private schools will be placed before Missouri voters on the Aug. 3 primary election ballot, Gov. Christopher S. Bond announced today.

2 injured in crash

FREDERICKTOWN — Two persons were injured Wednesday in a two-car collision two miles north of town on Copper Mines Road.

According to the highway patrol, the accident occurred at 6:10 p.m. when an eastbound car driven by Charlotte M. Wells, 18, of Fredericktown stopped on a hill because of cattle on the roadway and was struck from behind by an eastbound car driven by Dennis L. Matthews, 21, of Fredericktown as it came over the top of the hill.

Two passengers in the Matthews car, Gayla D. Smith, 9 months, of Millersville, and Nancy E. Matthews, 22, of Jackson, received minor injuries. The woman was taken to a Farmington hospital and the child was taken to a doctor's office.

CB radio stolen

A citizens band radio and 150 steel fence posts were reported stolen in separate thefts, police said today.

Robert Pelikan of Rolla told police a citizens band radio was taken from his truck Tuesday while it was parked in the parking lot at Kingsway Plaza Mall.

Joe Beck, 947 Vernon St., told police that someone took 150 steel fence posts from his farm on South Main Street sometime Monday.

The value of the fence posts was not immediately known, police said.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, June 3, the 155th day of 1976. There are 211 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1940, the Allied evacuation from France in World War Two was completed. Some 337,000 British, French and Belgian troops had been transported to England.

On this date:

In 1621, the Dutch West India Company received a charter for New Netherlands — now New York.

In 1808, Confederate President Jefferson Davis was born in what is now Todd County, Kentucky.

In 1937, the Duke of Windsor married Wallis Warfield Simpson of Baltimore in France.

In 1942, in World War Two, Japanese warplanes raided Dutch Harbor, Alaska.

In 1962, 30 members of an Atlanta art group were killed in an airliner crash at Paris, France.

In 1970, President Richard Nixon made a nationwide broadcast in which he described a U.S. and Vietnamese drive into Cambodia as a great success.

Five years ago: James Hoffa announced from prison that he would not seek re-election as president of the Teamsters Union.

Thought for today: Injustice is relatively easy to bear; what stings is justice — H.L. Mencken, American journalist, 1880-1956.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia resolved to reinforce Colonial troops in New York with nearly 14,000 militiamen to counter the British threat to the Middle Colonies.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, June 3, the 155th day of 1976. There are 211 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1940, the Allied evacuation from France in World War Two was completed. Some 337,000 British, French and Belgian troops had been transported to England.

On this date:

In 1621, the Dutch West India Company received a charter for New Netherlands — now New York.

In 1808, Confederate President Jefferson Davis was born in what is now Todd County, Kentucky.

In 1937, the Duke of Windsor married Wallis Warfield Simpson of Baltimore in France.

In 1942, in World War Two, Japanese warplanes raided Dutch Harbor, Alaska.

In 1962, 30 members of an Atlanta art group were killed in an airliner crash at Paris, France.

In 1970, President Richard Nixon made a nationwide broadcast in which he described a U.S. and Vietnamese drive into Cambodia as a great success.

Five years ago: James Hoffa announced from prison that he would not seek re-election as president of the Teamsters Union.

Thought for today: Injustice is relatively easy to bear; what stings is justice — H.L. Mencken, American journalist, 1880-1956.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia resolved to reinforce Colonial troops in New York with nearly 14,000 militiamen to counter the British threat to the Middle Colonies.

Condition of crops serious

50 years ago
June 3, 1926

Mrs. Ralph Anderson presents' her students in a piano recital at the Baptist Church Thursday night. The following will participate: Helen Virginia Keith, Louis Ellen Tanner, Virginia Baker, Henrietta Moore, Lynette Stallcup, Wootson Inez Hollingsworth, Hazel Lumsden, Rebecca Baker, Josephine Hudson, Louise Lewis, Anne Beck, Marie Marshall, Lucille Stubblefield, Virginia Hudson, Katherine Clark, and Elizabeth Stallcup.

The condition of farm crops is beginning to get serious. While as yet they have not materially suffered from the lack of rain, the need of moisture is becoming daily greater and a good rain within the next day or two would mean much to the farmers of this section.

Matthews--Little Miss Geneva Calvin spent the weekend in Sikeston visiting her little cousin, Juanita Calvin.

Morehouse--J. S. Wallace is in St. Louis attending the demonstration sale given by the Rice, Stix Dry Goods Co., there.

June 3, 1936

Mrs. J. H. Fowler, a Sikeston resident since 1906, died at her home Wednesday of Bright's disease. She had been ill several months.

A large crowd of old friends and relatives met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Brown, west of Matthews, to celebrate the birth anniversaries of Mrs. Brown's mother,Aunt Catty Smith, and J. H. Inman, who that day celebrated their 80th birthdays.

Charles Moose placed first in a nine-hole one-club tournament held at the golf course Sunday. He shot a 42, and with a seven handicap, had a score of 34. Barney Forrester, the second ranking player, also shot 42, but had a five handicap, making his score 37.

Miss Esther Duncan has received a curator's scholarship to the University of Missouri at Columbia, Superintendent Roy V. Ellise announced Saturday. As the highest ranking commercial student among 1936 graduates, Miss Duncan was awarded a scholarship to Draughons' Business College last month. She will spend the summer at the college in Memphis and will enroll in the university this fall.

ANGULAR BEAUTY CHARACTERIZES DESIGN

For those seeking a new experience in home ownership. The proud occupants of this contemporary home will forever be thrilled at their choice of such a distinguished exterior and exciting floor plan. The variety of shed roof planes contrast dramatically with the simplicity of the siding. Inside there is a feeling of spaciousness resulting from the sloping ceilings. The uniqueness of this design is further enhanced by the spiral stairway. The informal living zone has a beautiful built-in kitchen with Jenn-Air range, dining area with sliding glass doors to patio, and spacious living room with wood- burning fireplace with heatalator. Also included on first floor is a bedroom or den, large bath and laundry room. The second floor features a large master bedroom, setting room of bedrooms, bedroom with balcony and large bath. Located in choice subdivision. Aletha Dr.

ATTRACTIVELY DESIGNED

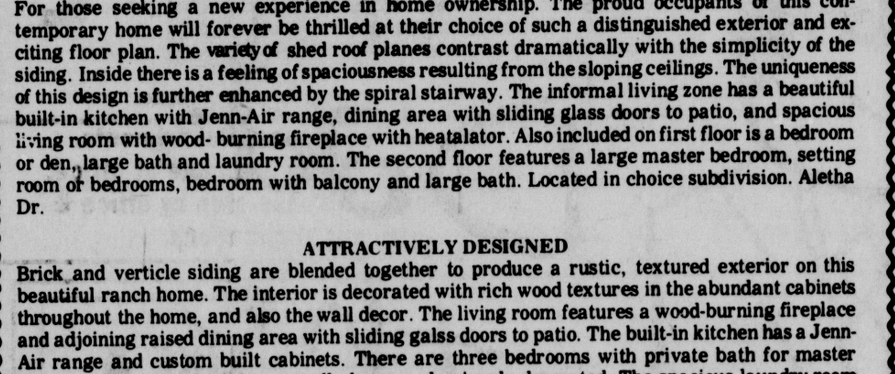

Brick and verticle siding are blended together to produce a rustic, textured exterior on this beautiful ranch home. The interior is decorated with rich wood textures in the abundant cabinets throughout the home, and also the wall decor. The living room features a wood-burning fireplace and adjoining raised dining area with sliding galss doors to patio. The built-in kitchen has a Jenn-Air range and custom built cabinets. There are three bedrooms with private bath for master bedroom. The main bath is unusually large and uniquely decorated. The spacious laundry room also has beautiful cabinets built-in. this is one of the most outstanding homes on the market today. Call us for an appointment. 207 Ellen Dr.

UNDER CONSTRUCTION

Designed for efficient living, every room of this home has been designed for utility. Divided from the remainder of the home are three bedrooms and two baths, one of which is private to the master bedroom. An open kitchen- dining area promotes ease in preparing and serving meals. Sliding glass doors connect this area with a back terrace. The living room has beautiful wood- burning fireplace. An extra large storage room or shop is connected to the carport. 205 Ellen Dr.

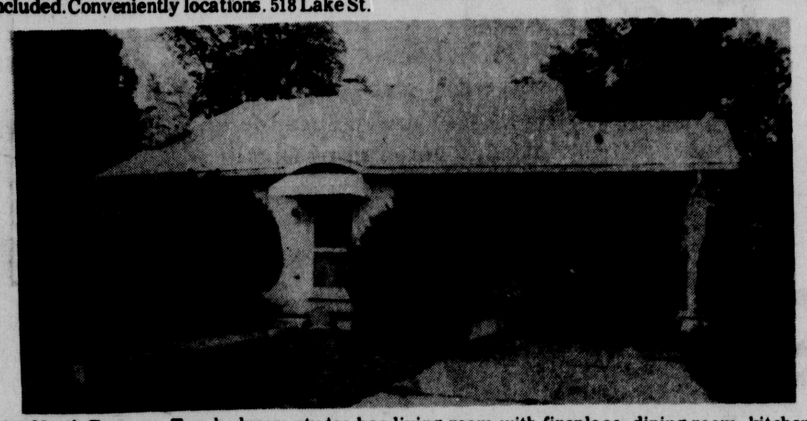

MORE THAN A TOUCH OF LUXURY

Here is a design for the family that needs the space and comfort of a larger home. The kitchen is a model of efficiency, open to the dining room yet shielded from view from the formal living room. The laundry is in an ideal location, just off the kitchen with entrance from the double garage. The entry foyer and hall gives ideal traffic control to family room, wood- burning fireplace, and the four bedrooms. This plan also includes two and one-half baths and plenty of closet space. Built by Ziegenhorn & Pratt Construction Co. 214 Sherrie Dr.

ANGULAR BEAUTY CHARACTERIZES DESIGN

For those seeking a new experience in home ownership. The proud occupants of this contemporary home will forever be thrilled at their choice of such a distinguished exterior and exciting floor plan. The variety of shed roof planes contrast dramatically with the simplicity of the siding. Inside there is a feeling of spaciousness resulting from the sloping ceilings. The uniqueness of this design is further enhanced by the spiral stairway. The informal living zone has a beautiful built-in kitchen with Jenn-Air range, dining area with sliding glass doors to patio, and spacious living room with wood- burning fireplace with heatalator. Also included on first floor is a bedroom or den, large bath and laundry room. The second floor features a large master bedroom, setting room or bedrooms, bedroom with balcony and large bath. Located in choice subdivision. Aletha Dr.

ATTRACTIVELY DESIGNED

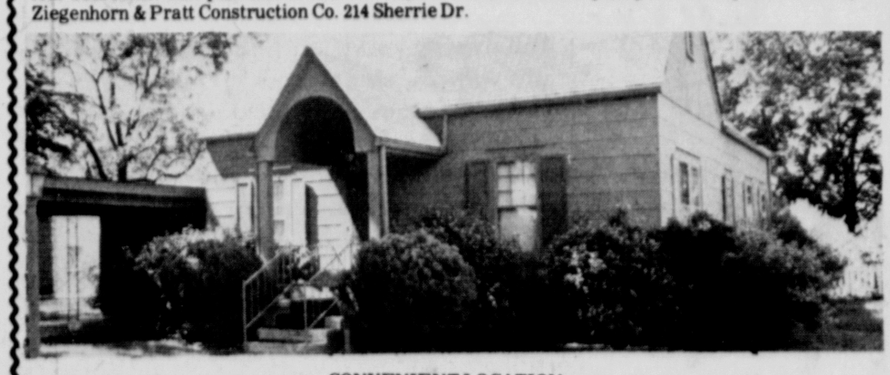

Brick and verticle siding are blended together to produce a rustic, textured exterior on this beautiful ranch home. The interior is decorated with rich wood textures in the abundant cabinets throughout the home, and also the wall decor. The living room features a wood-burning fireplace and adjoining raised dining area with sliding galss doors to patio. The built-in kitchen has a Jenn-Air range and custom built cabinets. There are three bedrooms with private bath for master bedroom. The main bath is unusually large and uniquely decorated. The spacious laundry room also has beautiful cabinets built-in. this is one of the most outstanding homes on the market today. Call us for an appointment. 207 Ellen Dr.

UNDER CONSTRUCTION

Designed for efficient living, every room of this home has been designed for utility. Divided from the remainder of the home are three bedrooms and two baths, one of which is private to the master bedroom. An open kitchen- dining area promotes ease in preparing and serving meals. Sliding glass doors connect this area with a back terrace. The living room has beautiful wood- burning fireplace. An extra large storage room or shop is connected to the carport. 205 Ellen Dr.

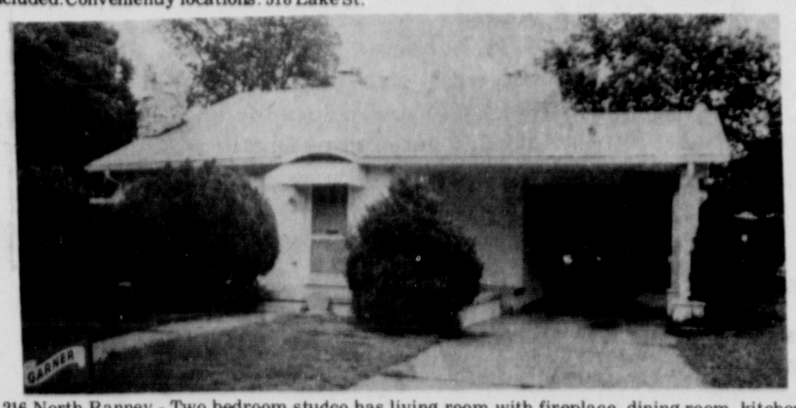

MORE THAN A TOUCH OF LUXURY

Here is a design for the family that needs the space and comfort of a larger home. The kitchen is a model of efficiency, open to the dining room yet shielded from view from the formal living room. The laundry is in an ideal location, just off the kitchen with entrance from the double garage. The entry foyer and hall gives ideal traffic control to family room, wood- burning fireplace, and the four bedrooms. This plan also includes two and one-half baths and plenty of closet space. Built by Ziegenhorn & Pratt Construction Co. 214 Sherrie Dr.

CONVENIENT LOCATION

Two large bedrooms, living room, kitchen has electric range, and glas porch. Private separate bedroom off carport. Central natural gas heat. Large metal sto g. Drapes are included. Conveniently locations. 518 Lake St.

216 North Ranney - Two bedroom stucco has living room with fireplace, dining room, kitchen, 2-car carport, and full basement. 8 x 10 Storage building. Zoned for either residential or light commercial.

For rent - Two- bedroom apartment. 535 North Ranney Furnished.

Deaths

Earl W. Burge

ESSEX— Earl William Burge, 61, a science teacher in the Richland R-1 School District, died at 4 a.m. Wednesday in Cleveland, Okla.

He was born Sept. 15, 1914 at LeGate, Okla.

On April 8, 1950 at Wyandotte, Okla., he married Martha Neely, who survives.

He was a veteran of World War II and a member of First Baptist Church, where he was a deacon. He as a past president of the Richland Community Teachers Association and was a member of the Missouri State Teachers Association.

Other survivors include: one son, Charles William Burge of the home; one daughter, Joyce Elaine Burge of Lutesville; his father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Friends may call after 2 p.m. Friday at Rainey Funeral Home in Dexter, where services are scheduled at 1 p.m. Saturday with the Revs. Bill Dailey and O. H. Brooks officiating.

Burial will follow in Essex Cemetery.

Carla R. Acord

ST. LOUIS— Carla Rene Acord, 15, died Wednesday in City Hospital at St. Louis. She previously had been a patient at Picker Special Center in Imperial for three and a half years.

She was born Oct. 15, 1960 at Millington, Tenn., to John Herbert Acord of Dexter and Elda Jolene McCollum Acord of Sedalia.

In addition to her parents, survivors include: two brothers, John Patrick and Mark Anthony Acord of Sedalia; three sisters, Rhonda Cynthia and Kelly Acord of Sedalia; maternal grandparents, Lester and Hazel Walker of Bernie; and paternal grandparents, Herbert and Edith Acord of Dexter.

Friends may call at Watkins & Sons Funeral Home in Dexter; where services are scheduled at 2 p.m. Friday.

Burial will follow in Hagy Cemetery at Dexter.

Larry McCoy

SHREVEPORT, La. — Larry McCoy, 46, a former resident of Gray Ridge and Dexter, Mo., died Sunday at his home of an apparent heart attack.

He was born May 22, 1930 in Conway County, Ark., to Chester and Leona McCoy of Sikeston, Mo., who survive, and had lived in Shreveport for seven years.

In addition to his parents, survivors include: one son, Mike McCoy of Dexter; two daughters, Cheryl and Karen McCoy of Dexter; two brothers, Ocel and Tom McCoy of Sikeston; and one sister, Mrs. Kay Long of Sikeston.

Services were conducted Tuesday in Rose Heath Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Don Fletcher, pastor of Broadacres Baptist Church.

Burial was in Centuries Memorial Park Cemetery with graveside military rites conducted by an Air Force honor guard.

Economic horsing around adds animals to market menagerie

It might be confusing to introduce the name of another animal into the stock market menagerie, in which bulls and bears are the senior citizens, but it is entirely appropriate in view of the market's lack of action.

For 3½ months the averages haven't changed very much, and the stock market reports sound the same each day: "Stocks drifted today in anther dull and inconclusive session...."

Every so often a flurry develops, but it seems to lead nowhere after a day or so.

The master of an old Spanish sailing ship might understand and sympathize with the investor caught in such a situation, especially if he, the master, had once been becalmed in the horse latitudes.

Those latitudes, your dusty geography text might inform you, are two regions, one about 30 degrees north and the other 30 degrees south, marked by high pressure, heat, frequent calms, day to day sameness, and light and baffling winds.

Caught in these latitudes, with water running low, sailors were said sometimes to dispatch their live cargo, often horses for the West Indies, into the briney depths.

There is another characteristic of the horses — descending air, which might be appropriate also in describing stock market conditions. A lot of confidence seems to have gone out of the market.

Several months ago it wasn't uncommon to see some very inflated forecasts, such as 1,200 points on the Dow Jones industrial average. It remains near 970 or 980 points, however, and those puffed up forecasts are much rarer.

The chief deflator seems to be the probability that interest rates will continue to rise, perhaps producing a 7.75 per cent prime lending rate late this year, compared with 6.75 last week and 7 per cent this week.

Rising interest rates generally mean trouble for business and for the market, drawing away funds into fixed-income securities, and raising the cost of doing business. They usually mean the swiftest part of a recovery is over.

There are also disconcerting reports that some insiders have been selling, that institutional funds are pretty much used up, and also that future institutional commitments might be more heavily in the bond markets.

Various other explanations are drawn in day to day, but they are as ephemeral as the light, baffling winds — incapable of moving prices for long in any one direction.

Meanwhile, the crew of stock market investors is growing lethargic. On Tuesday, volume fell to 13.88 million shares, the lowest in about four months. The most activ stock, Texaco, was unchanged in price.

Eventually, of course, you may expect movement, but even that forecast is rather pathetic when you look back at the record: It is the very same forecast made two months ago, when some investors already were growing bored.

Now, as the same sameness persist, with no direction sustainable for more than a few days, some of the crew are thinking of tossing some of the livestock overboard.

Tight security in Pine Bluff at Martha Mitchell's funeral

Services were planned for today for Mrs. Mitchell, who won the nation's attention as a colorful, sometimes caustic critic of Nixon's administration.

She lay in state in a covered casket, but hundreds of residents of this Arkansas River community were kept outside locked doors of the funeral home at Mitchell's orders.

"Martha wouldn't have wanted it that way," said one disappointed woman Wednesday after she was turned away from the funeral home.

Mitchell set down strict instructions that reporters covering the funeral remain in the back pews of the colonial-style Presbyterian Church during today's services.

The former attorney general, the couple's daughter and Mrs. Mitchell's son by a previous marriage were given front-row pews.

When asked about the tight security, funeral director Adam Robinson said: "That's what he (Mitchell) asked for, and that's what I'm going to honor."

Mitchell refused to talk with reporters.

Mrs. Mitchell, 57, died Monday of a rare and painful form of bone cancer. She is the ninth person to be buried in the family plot and a spot was picked for her at the foot of her mother's grave beneath massive oak trees.

After the initial news of her death, this city began preparing for the homecoming of "their Martha."

Many townspeople interviewed said they were proud of Martha Mitchell.

Only on one of five issues did Carter's supporters pick his position correctly — government guaranteed jobs — which they pegged by a 42 per cent to 14 per cent margin.

But most of the supporters of all the candidates listed in the survey correctly identified the positions of their favorite candidate on this issue that has been a prime focus of Democratic legislative efforts this year in Congress.

President Ford's supporters correctly identified his positions on three issues, missed on one and split evenly on the other.

Reagan's influence with the GOP partisans was most clearly seen in the responses of Ford's supporters on the welfare issue.

Ford's backers said he supports turning welfare over to the states by a 40 per cent to 17 per cent margin. Ford has said he favors welfare reform, but has opposed placing the financial burden of welfare solely on the states.

Just over 56 per cent of Ford's supporters say personal factors were the crucial factor in their decision to support him, against 20 per cent who cited his stands on the issues. About 18 per cent said both factors were crucial.

Non-candidate Sen. Hubert Humphrey was the choice of some of those interviewed. Their explanation of their reasons for picking the Minnesota Democrat broke down this way:

—Personal factors, 66 per cent;
—Issues, 17 per cent;
—Both, 16 per cent; and
—Don't know, 5 per cent.

Supporters of Washington Sen. Henry M. Jackson, who has halted active campaigning, gave the following explanation of their support for the Washington democrat:

—Personal factors, 65 per cent;
—Issues, 11 per cent;
—Both 13 per cent; and
—Don't know, 9 per cent.

Sikeston residents honored at conference

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Twenty-two persons were recognized for their dedication and outstanding service to the Information and Referral Program of the Southeast Missouri Area Agency on Aging at a two- day conference May 20 and 21 in the Ramada Inn.

Engraved plaques and certificates were presented to the 22 volunteers during a luncheon held in conjunction with the Southeast Missouri Area Conference on Aging.

Sikeston residents among the honorees included O'Neil Caverno, Jewell Davis, Edith Ford, Selma Gruen, Irene Hopper, Kit Marshall, Leah Ladd, Elsa Melzer, Susie Mill, Virginia Nickell, Dorothy Scott and Lucille Stubblefield.

Older persons from 18 counties in Southeast Missouri attended the two- day session, which was designed to inform, educate and honor older Missourians as part of May's Older Americans Month activities.

Larry McCoy

SHREVEPORT, La. — Larry McCoy, 46, a former resident of Gray Ridge and Dexter, Mo., died Sunday at his home of an apparent heart attack.

He was born May 22, 1930 in Conway County, Ark., to Chester and Leona McCoy of Sikeston, Mo., who survive, and had lived in Shreveport for seven years.

In addition to his parents, survivors include: one son, Mike McCoy of Dexter; two daughters, Cheryl and Karen McCoy of Dexter; two brothers, Ocel and Tom McCoy of Sikeston; and one sister, Mrs. Kay Long of Sikeston.

Services were conducted Tuesday in Rose Heath Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Don Fletcher, pastor of Broadacres Baptist Church.

Burial was in Centuries Memorial Park Cemetery with graveside military rites conducted by an Air Force honor guard.

It might be confusing to introduce the name of another animal into the stock market menagerie, in which bulls and bears are the senior citizens, but it is entirely appropriate in view of the market's lack of action.

For 3½ months the averages haven't changed very much, and the stock market reports sound the same each day: "Stocks drifted today in anther dull and inconclusive session...."

Every so often a flurry develops, but it seems to lead nowhere after a day or so.

The master of an old Spanish sailing ship might understand and sympathize with the investor caught in such a situation, especially if he, the master, had once been becalmed in the horse latitudes.

Those latitudes, your dusty geography text might inform you, are two regions, one about 30 degrees north and the other 30 degrees south, marked by high pressure, heat, frequent calms, day to day sameness, and light and baffling winds.

Caught in these latitudes, with water running low, sailors were said sometimes to dispatch their live cargo, often horses for the West Indies, into the briney depths.

There is another characteristic of the horses — descending air, which might be appropriate also in describing stock market conditions. A lot of confidence seems to have gone out of the market.

Several months ago it wasn't uncommon to see some very inflated forecasts, such as 1,200 points on the Dow Jones industrial average. It remains near 970 or 980 points, however, and those puffed up forecasts are much rarer.

The chief deflator seems to be the probability that interest rates will continue to rise, perhaps producing a 7.75 per cent prime lending rate late this year, compared with 6.75 last week and 7 per cent this week.

Rising interest rates generally mean trouble for business and for the market, drawing away funds into fixed-income securities, and raising the cost of doing business. They usually mean the swiftest part of a recovery is over.

There are also disconcerting reports that some insiders have been selling, that institutional funds are pretty much used up, and also that future institutional commitments might be more heavily in the bond markets.

Various other explanations are drawn in day to day, but they are as ephemeral as the light, baffling winds — incapable of moving prices for long in any one direction.

Meanwhile, the crew of stock market investors is growing lethargic. On Tuesday, volume fell to 13.88 million shares, the lowest in about four months. The most activ stock, Texaco, was unchanged in price.

Eventually, of course, you may expect movement, but even that forecast is rather pathetic when you look back at the record: It is the very same forecast made two months ago, when some investors already were growing bored.

Now, as the same sameness persist, with no direction sustainable for more than a few days, some of the crew are thinking of tossing some of the livestock overboard.

Tight security in Pine Bluff at Martha Mitchell's funeral

Services were planned for today for Mrs. Mitchell, who won the nation's attention as a colorful, sometimes caustic critic of Nixon's administration.

She lay in state in a covered casket, but hundreds of residents of this Arkansas River community were kept outside locked doors of the funeral home at Mitchell's orders.

"Martha wouldn't have wanted it that way," said one disappointed woman Wednesday after she was turned away from the funeral home.

Mitchell set down strict instructions that reporters covering the funeral remain in the back pews of the colonial-style Presbyterian Church during today's services.

The former attorney general, the couple's daughter and Mrs. Mitchell's son by a previous marriage were given front-row pews.

When asked about the tight security, funeral director Adam Robinson said: "That's what he (Mitchell) asked for, and that's what I'm going to honor."

Mitchell refused to talk with reporters.

Mrs. Mitchell, 57, died Monday of a rare and painful form of bone cancer. She is the ninth person to be buried in the family plot and a spot was picked for her at the foot of her mother's grave beneath massive oak trees.

After the initial news of her death, this city began preparing for the homecoming of "their Martha."

Many townspeople interviewed said they were proud of Martha Mitchell.
